The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine Mayo Clinic
(Register and Tribune Syndicate, 1960)

Child Who Has Had Encephalitis

More and more today we physicians are learning that many a child who has had a bad attack of measles or whooping-cough has been left with an injury to the brain due to the virus. Often these children are a problem, and no one connects their troublesome behavior with their attack of measles. Sometimes these children have twitching movements in the face or hands or other parts of the body. Some are so "twitchy" they look as if they were headed for an attack of St. Vitus dance. Many are so restless they are unable to sit still. There often is an abruptness or clumsiness in the performance of simple movements. The child may be a bit explosive in his behavior. He may be erratic, and he may get violent if crossed.

DR. ALVAREZ

He may be unable to hold his attention on anything for long, and his power of concentration may be poor, especially at school. Many of these children do things on the spur of the moment, without thinking of what may happen to them, and later, if they have hurt someone, they show no remorse or shame. Their school performances are often poor. Careful examination by a neurologist may fail to show much wrong. In quite a few cases, the electroencephalograms (electric records of the brain action) show a definite area in the brain that has been injured. The intelligence may not be impaired. Often treatment with amphetamine or benzedrine will help a great deal. Dr. Sol Levy of Spokane, recently reported the cases of 100 children who were antisocial, asocial, or psychopatic, and who apparently had had an attack of encephalitis. They were given benzedrine, and in 98 cases the results were excellent.

Osteoporosis

Many aging people ask what they can do for osteoporosis, or a loss of lime salts in the vertebras in their spine. Because of the softening of the bones, the person may get decidedly round-shouldered. Because this defect occurs so commonly in the aged, doctors have assumed that the cause is a loss of the sex hormones. But often the giving of large doses of these hormones does no good, and hence, as yet, we haven't any satisfactory treatment for the disease.

Now, I read that Dr. Marshall R. Urist, and Nance M. Deutsch of the University of California in Los Angeles have found that when white leghorn hens are bred for heavy egg production, they can develop osteoporosis. This discovery can now give research workers a chance to study the disease easily. Already they have found that in the chickens there is too much female hormone instead of too little. This disease can be made much worse by giving ACTH, which is a hormone in the pituitary gland (at the base of the brain) which stirs up the adrenal glands to produce much cortisone. Curiously, the ACTH does not affect roosters.

Dr. Urist finds that three times as many women as men get into trouble with an osteoporosis so severe that bones break without much injury. The giving of ACTH to elderly men and women does not produce osteoporosis. It is to be hoped that the new studies on chickens will now throw light on the cause of the disease in men and women. As I sometimes say in this column, man shares many of his diseases with the lower animals, and this fact helps doctors in finding helpful drugs. For instance; our best drugs for helping children with epilepsy were discovered by testing many new chemicals on elipetic cats.

A while ago Drs. Richard S. Gubner and Harry E. Ungerleider of the Equitable Life Assurance Society's Bureaus of Medical Research, pointed out that in the first two years after a coronary attack the mortality rate is six to seven times normal. After that the mortality rate falls, and keeps falling. The milder the attack the more complete the recovery. The older the age at which the attack occurs the more favorable the outlook.

A study in London by Drs. J. M. Berg and B. H. Kirman has shown that among 1390 mentally retarded children studied 6.4 per cent were members of twin pairs. This is about three times the number in the general population. Many of the defective twins were much underweight—as twins often are; also, many had other defects in the head, the heart, the feet, or other parts of the body. Curiously, Mongolism was six times as common in "singletons" as in twins.

The cause for the tendency to defects in twins is not known. It is probably responsible for the fact that there are some 2½ times as many still-births among twins as among singletons.

Dr. Alvarez' new booklet may be obtained by sending 25 cents and a large stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for "Head Noises and Dizziness." Address Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, Dept. MMT, The Register and Tribune Syndicate, Box 957, Des Moines 4, Iowa.
