

Russia Failing To Provide Data On Radiation

United Nations, N.Y. — (UPI) — The Soviet Union has failed to keep up with the United States and other Western nations in providing public information on atomic radiation, despite its loud propaganda blasts on the subject, informed sources said Thursday.

The sources said the U.N. scientific committee, composed of 15 nations including the major powers, has unsuccessfully pressed the Soviets for more information on such critical matters as radio-active fallout rate and level, the presence of strontium-90 and caesium-137 and human exposure studies.

Work Hampered
Lack of adequate data from the Soviet Union was said to be hampering work of the committee which thus far has had to base its findings primarily on reports by the United States, Japan, Britain and other western or pro-western nations.

Ironically, Russia in its official statements has attached much more importance to the work of the scientific committee than has the Western powers.

Basis for Test Ban

When the first general report on radiation was issued by the committee in 1959, Russia insisted that it be used as the basis for a mandatory nuclear weapons test ban.

In Washington, high American officials have expressed fear that Russia may secretly be staging nuclear weapons tests, particularly tests underground, despite an unofficial moratorium.

Official scientific committee spokesmen were reluctant to express opinions when asked whether the Soviets might be withholding radiation data deliberately, or whether they simply did not have the scientific machinery necessary to provide it.

"I wouldn't like to say one way or another," said a committee official.

Rate of Delinquency In California Down

San Francisco — (UPI) — California had 9,735 more juvenile arrests in 1959 than the year before, but Atty. Gen. Stanley Mosk said the rate of delinquency was actually going down because the teenage population is growing so fast.

"The figure of 160,730 juvenile arrests in 1959 is an increase of 2.8 per cent over the previous year," Mosk said. But, he added, the population in the age group from 10 to 17 years grew by an estimated 7 or 8 per cent in that year.

"This would indicate there must be an increasing number of 'good guys' and that there is actually a net percentage reduction" in delinquency, the attorney general stated. He said also that the rate of increase in juvenile arrests of 2.8 per cent for the year compared favorably with an increase of 10 per cent the previous year.

World Endorses Two Demo Candidates

Coos Bay — (UPI) — The Coos Bay World Saturday endorsed the candidacy of Democrat Maurice Newberger for United States Senator over Republican Elmo Smith.

The afternoon daily earlier endorsed John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.) for president.
