ZOO DIRECTOR DIES

Washington—UPI—William M. Mann, 74, director of the Washington zoo for 31 years, died Monday.

these women that they are all wrong, and their stories are silly, but they keep bothering me.

Actually, my correspondent is correct. Doctors no longer believe in these old theories about the marking of babies. The old wives would not believe in them either if they knew how early in fetal life the baby grows past the stage in which several of the common defects could come to him.

Should One Have One's Vagus Nerves Cut?
Occasionally a man writes to ask if he should permit a surgeon to cut the two big vagus nerves that run from the brain to the stomach.

Perhaps many of the doctors were influenced, also, by the fact that they always could get instant relief from their ulcer distress by going on a vacation and getting some rest and mental peace.
I think it highly significant that among all of the dozens of doctors whom, for years, I
