Morse Silenced in Expressing Own Views as United Nations Delegate

By A. ROBERT SMITH
Mail Tribune
Washington Correspondent

Washington (Special) – The Senate's most independent and formidable talker, Wayne Morse, is virtually tongue-tied in his new role as a United Nations delegate.

A. Robt Smith

It's not that Morse isn't allowed to say anything, but but what he is allowed to say is very tightly bound by the State Department.

"I sit there as an ambassador, not as a senator," explained Morse, who returned here briefly to catch up on business in his Senate office.

In other words, Morse and the other four members of the American delegation must speak only in defense of a position taken by the Eisenhower Administration. When they differ, they must keep their differences private.

Morse said there is a chance for him and others to express differences in the private meetings the delegation holds three mornings a week before the General Assembly convenes. There they are briefed by a staff expert on what is expected to come up that day and the next day in the Assembly.

Position Papers

As the issues develop, the State Department presents position papers sizing up the American position for the guidance of the delegates–and the delegates cannot stray from beyond the bounds of these positions.

"It's pretty hard to do sometimes," Morse conceded.

His differences with the Eisenhower Administration on foreign policies have been numerous over the past seven years.

Morse was not at liberty to disclose the differences that showed up within the U.S. delegation during the past two weeks. One of them quite likely was the question of policy toward China and Formosa, for Morse has for years advocated that the UN be given trusteeship supervision over Formosa. The American position, however, has been and remains one of recognition of the Formosa regime of Chiang Kai-shek as the government of China.

Morse said there will probably be another two weeks of the current general debate in the Assembly. This is always the opening period of any session, at which time each country may make its position on current affairs clear or reply to another country. Theoretically all 98 countries could take a turn, but not all of them do.

The committees are just beginning to function now, he said, and will become busier after the general debate has died down. Morse is on the trusteeship committee which handles a number of controversial issues such as colonial vs. nationalistic disputes.

Votes as Instructed

In those committee sessions Morse will have to vote as he is instructed. The first issue was on a request by the Union of South Africa to change the agenda to accommodate its prime minister who was in New York. All the new African nations were opposed to doing any favors for the head of a government which practices a policy of strict racial segregation. Morse said he was instructed to abstain when the roll was called. The motion was easily defeated to change the agenda. To abstain is a way of not taking sides.

When issues come up later in this committee, it will be Morse's opportunity to speak, but always within the framework of U.S. policy. Each delegate is appointed to one committee. And each nation member is represented on each committee, which means a committee has 98 members.

Another ambassadorial function Morse must perform is to give a luncheon every Tuesday for 10 or 12 delegate committee members from other countries. By the end of the session in December all will be invited.

"This is diplomacy in action," explained Morse. "It's for good will. The idea is to get acquainted."

Has Private Office

The luncheons of this nature, just like the living expenses of the American delegation, are paid for by the State Department. Morse has an office in what amounts to the U.S. embassy at the UN. Because he is a senator, Morse has a private office and a secretary to handle his business. His secretary is from his Washington office.

"It's a great education for me," observed Morse. "I had no idea before of the detailed working of the UN."

The senator indicated he felt confident he could carry off this unique assignment with its strictures against the sort of independent talk and action he has always craved. In January he will be back in the Senate with a good deal to say and no more restrictions on saying it.

U.S. Denies U2 Spy Flight Planned

Washington – (UPI) – The United States today bluntly denied charges by Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev that this country planned to send another U2 spy plane over Russia this week but abandoned the project when Khrushchev threatened to shoot down the aircraft.

State Department Press Officer Francis W. Tully Jr. said the United States had drafted no plans for another U2 flight since President Eisenhower said in Paris last May that U2 flights "are not to be resumed" by his administration.

The President made his statements after the collapse of the Paris summit conference where the chief executive refused to apologize to Khrushchev for the ill-fated May 1 U2 flight which ended 1,300 miles inside Russia with the capture of the pilot, Francis G. Powers. The pilot was sentenced to 10 years detention by the Russians.

Medford High School

Edited by Sandy Shugart. Staff: Katie Leavitt, Hedy Ripfl, Mike Miller, Cheryl Bulger, Vicki Toenniges, Sue Sneed, Al House, Heather Rode, and Judy Foreman.

The annual homecoming celebration, Tornadia Week, is in full swing this week. Such traditional items as a bonfire and pep rally, a noise parade, the naming of King and Queen Tornadia, the Medford-Klamath Falls football challenge, and a semi-formal dance will add to the festivities of the week.

The annual bonfire and rally is scheduled to take place Thursday in the early evening near Jackson school. The following afternoon will see the advent of the noise parade which will leave the school about 2:15 p.m. and proceed downtown. Each club is required to enter a float to avoid being assessed a $5 penalty. Faculty members, acting as judges, will pick the top entrants in originality and noise. Cash prizes will go to the winners.

Friday evening during the half-time of the Medford-Klamath Falls game, the royal Tornadia court will be crowned. Completing the week will be a semi-formal dance Saturday night in the boys' gymnasium.

Both the 1959-60 Hi-Times and Crater have recently been notified of top ratings by national judging groups.

Hi-Times received a first class rating by the National Scholastic Press association. Critics lauded the paper for its news coverage, sports and editorials, but criticized it somewhat on features, page makeup, and printing.

The Crater received an A-plus rating from National School Yearbook association, the highest rating given by that group. Also entered in National Scholastic Press competition, the publication has yet to hear from that group.

Lynn Sjolund, vocal music instructor, has announced the ensemble assignments for the 1960-61 school year.

This year 20 people were chosen for Madrigal. They are Betsy Beck, Nancy Hinman, Diana Hunter, Sharon Smith, and Linda Jo Waltermire, sopranos; Linda Carver, Mary Kay Harris, Becky Rowan, Lois Stedman, and Roberta Willett, altos; Bob Heide, Jim Henson, Wally Huffman, Dick Ragsdale, and Bill Rupp, tenors; and Joel Gregory, Art House, Ralph Lobdell, Dave Lundquist and John McKinley, basses.

A new group added to the vocal music department this year was a mixed ensemble. Members include Sara Hinkle, Julie Gandt, Cassie Thompsen, Ann Barker, Mary Barr, Karen Christensen, Sharon Huffman, DeAnne Taylor, Gary Highland, Mike Higgins, Jim Stiger, Fred Lorish, Jerry Stephens, Bill Mills, Roland Gangstee, and Frank Schuchard.

A more advanced girls group is the nonette. The predominently junior ensemble includes Kathy Allen, Claudia Owen, Linda Johnson, Ellen Montgomery, Judy Van Gordon, Sue Jahn, JoAnn Johnson, Julie Latham, and Lynda Michael.

The sophomore boys octet includes Larry Berg, Dick Deffley, Jim Stiger, Gary Highland, Reed Harris, Sten Lovenborg, Bill Buettner, and Jim Snodgrass.

Last Thursday all juniors interested in the American Field Service program met with DeAnne Taylor, MHS's foreign exchange for this summer. DeAnne informed them of the expenses involved, the necessary qualifications, and the responsibilities which must be assumed by anyone who is chosen as a foreign exchange student.

All interested juniors will be interviewed by a local committee some time next week. Six qualified students will be selected by the local committee and their names along with pertinent data, will be sent to New York where the final selection will take place.

Activity and data calendars were sold by the Future Nurses of America last week. The calendar lists all the important events taking place during the school year. Part of the profits are scheduled to go toward a $100 scholarship given by the FNA to girls interested in becoming nurses.

Free chess lessons are being given this year by Robert Semon, advisor of the Chess club. The lessons are given on various afternoons during seventh period and after school.

A Naval representative, Commander Donnally, spoke last Wednesday in the MHS auditorium to NROTC aspirants. He lectured on the benefits and requirements of the Navy grant.

Physical, mental, and character requirements were discussed. Physical requirements include 20/20 vision, perfect hearing, good health, and no disfiguring marks. A test stressing math and English is given to determine mental abilities.

Successful applicants are appointed midshipmen, U.S. Naval Reserve, and will be paid as such for a period not exceeding four years. All school expenses are paid for four years of college. There is also an allotment of $600 a year to the student to defray personal expenses.

Upon graduation the trainee becomes a commissioned officer and must serve a tenure of three years.

A new addition to the Medford Athletic association is a swimming and diving team. All students of MHS and the freshmen of the junior highs are eligible. The coaches will be Ken Lyons and Glenn Sharmon.

A YMCA membership, swim suit, and a towel are required. Expenses for out - of - town meets must be assumed by the participants.

Appraisers Set Meeting Tonight

The Society of Residential Appraisers will meet tonight at 6:30 o'clock at the Mark Antony hotel, Ashland, for a dinner to be followed by a meeting.

A panel discussion will be held on estimating highest and best use. Walter Jones will serve as moderator.

Information concerning the proposed appraisers school scheduled for December will be available and details for the course are to be announced, according to John Fleck, president of the organization.

OF SMITH & MEN

By Jack Smith
(c) 1960 — Times-Mirror Syndicate

Nothing in the educational code that I can find says that teachers should mold themselves to the moment, anticipate the interests of pupils and act accordingly in the national interest.

But usually they do.

For example, it wasn't until the second day of the World Series that I found out my boy was taking a transistor radio to junior high school to listen to the ball game.

He set out that morning with what appeared to be only his books, his lunch, a yellow zinnia for the teacher and his monthly new pair of tennis shoes, which were already tired looking and black.

• • •

He was singing a song when he walked out the door. This is a fatal mistake. I am too old to fall for that casual nonsense.

Under sharp interrogation he confessed he had a transistor radio in his lunch sack, borrowed from the little girl next door. She is an outgoing person and doesn't understand baseball.

"How come?" I asked him. This is a primitive question, but it usually gets to the heart of the matter.

He explained that the transistor radio was operated by batteries and kept his tuna sandwich warm.

• • •

Well, now, I like baseball as well as the next man, but as a father I cannot surrender to that sort of persiflage. Besides, tuna is no good warm.

"You can't take that to school," I told him.

"Why not?" he said. "Last year the teacher had one in her drawer."

"That's different," I explained. "That was a Dodger year."

"I thought this was a democracy," he said.

"All right," I said, "how did you know the teacher had a radio in her drawer?"

"Because," he said, "she told us the score at the end of each inning and also the home runs. She must have got it somewhere."

I wish I had, when I was young and pliable, a teacher like that one. Mine kept trying to interest me in Beowulf, who couldn't have played shortstop with a shovel. Besides, she was a secret Giant fan and smoked cigarettes in the ladies' gymnasium powder room between classes.

"You can't take the radio to school," I told him. "That's final."

• • •

Nonetheless, at dinner he seemed well informed on the details and refinements of the day's contest.

We were all eating frittata con Zucchini, a dish my wife got out of a magazine and hasn't yet mastered, when he asked me whether, if it had been my decision, I would have tried to make third from first on a line-drive single to left field.

Well, of course I wouldn't, but that wasn't the real issue. I would have stopped at second.

• • •

"You seem to know a lot of details about this game for a boy who was supposed to be in school," I said. "How come?"

"I heard some teachers talking about it between classes," he said. "I guess they heard it on their radios. Nobody told them they couldn't bring any."

Next year why not show the series in school auditoriums on television and bring this delinquency out in the open?

It could be declared a national holiday, and anybody who doesn't care for baseball could stay home and listen to Mozart.
