Anti-American Japan Politician Assassinated

Tokyo – (UPI) – An extreme right-wing teen-ager fatally stabbed anti-American socialist politician Inejiro Asanuma, before a thousand persons on a public stage today. The assassination touched off demonstrations by 15,000 Zengakuren students, radical unionists and other leftists.

Police identified the killer as Futaya Yamaguchi, 17, a freshman at the Daito-Bunda Academy and a member of the extreme right-wing Great Japan Patriotic Society.

Resignation Demanded

The demonstrators marched on police headquarters demanding the resignation of Police Chief Kameyoshi Teramoto, who they charged had not provided adequate security for Asanuma. Fighting broke out when the extreme leftist Zengakuren students in the crowd tried to break through the iron gates at police headquarters. About 2,000 helmeted police beat them back. The crowd then moved off and demonstrated in front of the premier's residence, throwing stones, taunting police and snake-dancing in the streets.

Opposed Eisenhower Visit

Asanuma was chairman of the Socialist Party and had violently opposed the United States-Japan Security Treaty. He took part in a number of wild demonstrations in front of the Parliament Building against the treaty that helped force cancellation of President Eisenhower's visit to Japan in June.

Asanuma's death was the first political assassination in more than three decades in Japan, where government by murder used to be a common practice under prewar militarists.

It was the third political stabbing in Japan this year. Former Premier Nobusuke Kishi was stabbed in the thigh while attending a political party reception last July. Jotaro Kawakami, another Socialist Party leader, also was stabbed by a student during the anti-American demonstrations in June. Kishi and Kawakami recovered.

CAMPAIGNERS HEAR TRUMAN—Former President Harry Truman gestures with his hat as he delivers a pep talk to Texas campaign workers at the LBJ ranch at Johnson City, Tex. Truman told some 3,000 people how he did it in '48 after they had a barbeque lunch at the ranch of Democratic Vice Presidential Candidate Lyndon B. Johnson.

Baptist Preachers Denounce Truman; Hornet Nest Stirred

Waco, Tex.–(UPI)–A group of Baptist preachers today denounced former President Truman—a Baptist campaigning for a Roman Catholic—for coming into the heart of the Texas Bible belt and trying to tell them how to vote.

Truman told a crowd of 4,000 Tuesday night that religion was the "false issue" of the presidential race and that the Constitution guarantees that no candidate shall ever undergo a religious test.

Whatever the jaunty ex-president hoped to accomplish on his two-day swing through Texas—he has stirred up a hornet's nest on two fronts.

Besides the condemnation by the Baptist clergy, the Republican National committee Tuesday denounced him for his "go to hell" speech at San Antonio the night before. Truman took the attitude he couldn't care less what the GOP thinks of his campaign tactics.

Morton Protests Remarks

Republican National Chairman Thruston B. Morton protested in a telegram to Sen. John F. Kennedy and asked him to disown Truman's remark to a group of Texas Democrats that "If you vote for Nixon, you ought to go to hell."

He called Truman Kennedy's "hatchet man" and said Truman also violated the code of fair campaign practice by his "flat statement that the vice president of the United States is a liar."

When asked if he wanted to change or modify his charge that "Nixon never told the truth in his life," Truman said:

"No, I won't. You tell me when he ever told the truth."

Ministers Pass Resolution

Truman told his Waco audience that Nixon is "paying lip service to religious tolerance, but he is quite willing to accept any vote that may come his way by reason of religious intolerance."

He said the Nixon campaign was one of "dropping a little smear here and a false inference and a half truth some other place. One of the saddest things about this whole sorry business is that some of the activity is carried on through our Protestant churches with political money contributed for this purpose to avoid paying income tax."

While Truman was speaking, a meeting of 72 Baptist ministers passed a resolution charging that Truman "is presuming too much if he presumes that it is his prerogative or that of any one else to tell Baptists what they should do in this election or in any other realm of conscience."

The Rev. Harold E. Lindsey, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Waco, said the ministers came from throughout central Texas.

Smith Wants Snake To Remain Fish Sanctuary Pending Passage Solution; Opposes Nez Perce

By United Press International

Mrs. Maurine Neuberger and Elmo Smith, rivals for the U.S. Senate, appeared before the League of Women Voters in Portland today as their campaign headed into the final four weeks before election.

The two candidates have made several joint appearances in recent days while keeping up a busy pace of other talks.

Smith Tuesday night said his Democratic opponent had not stated her stand on the high dam issue on the Snake river, where different groups are vieing for Mountain Sheep and Nez Perce dams. He said Mrs. Neuberger "draws support from the people who favor building of the Nez Perce dam and I can only assume that she also approves construction of the project."

In Favor of Bill

He said he was in favor of a bill which would provide the Snake river remain a fish sanctuary pending a solution to the problem of fish passage, and that he opposed the Nez Perce Dam.

Mrs. Neuberger today recommended a four-point program "to bolster America's prestige in the world and block Communist influence in under-developed nations."

Her points included cooperation with prosperous Western democracies in a program of long-term development loans; establishments of a Point-Four Youth Corps to train young Americans in basic technical skills necessary to combat poverty, disease, illiteracy and hunger in less favored countries; channeling of surplus crops into a food-for-peace program in cooperation with the United Nations, and leadership in an International Medical Year.

"None of these programs would be a burden on the U.S. economy," Mrs. Neuberger said.

Smith said at Pacific University Tuesday that federal aid to education would "only add to the heavy load already carried by Oregon's overburdened taxpayers." He said "besides increasing taxes, Oregon would get back less than it pays in under any formula so far proposed." He said he did favor federal aid to education in certain fields, such as research in education, medicine and science and other fields, and for scholarships to individuals whose talents obviously would be of unusual value to the nation.

Hatfield Speaks

Gov. Mark Hatfield spoke at McMinnville Tuesday night in support of State Sen. Carl Francis, Republican nominee for attorney general. Hatfield criticized Democratic incumbent Robert Y. Thornton and said neither he nor three preceding governors had been able to depend on Thornton as legal counsel.

In other political news:

. . . Rep. Charles O. Porter (D-Ore.) scheduled talks in his home town of Eugene today with a luncheon speech at Albany scheduled Thursday. Porter Tuesday was endorsed for reelection by the Coos Bay World.

. . . Rep. Walter Norblad (R-Ore.) spoke in Corvallis today and praised development of the Polaris missile by the Navy which he said had added another effective and deadly weapon to our diversified system of defense.

Taxes Said Too High

. . . State Sen. Monroe Sweetland told a Dallas audience today that local property taxes in Oregon are too high and that the state is not carrying its "fair share" of the responsibilities for supporting schools. Sweetland, Democratic candidate for secretary of state, spoke in Medford Tuesday night.

. . . Rudie Wilhelm Jr., chairman of the Highway Protection Committee, said claims that measure No. 15 to control billboards would abolish the billboard industry were misleading. He said the measure would affect only 10 per cent of all billboards in the state; that the measure does not affect billboards in city limits.

Satellites at Cost Offered Private Firms

Portland –(UPI)– The government today offered to furnish satellites at cost to private companies with promising plans for establishing commercial communications stations in space.

The offer was announced by Dr. T. Keith Glennan, director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, in a talk to the Science, Engineering, and New Technologies Committee of the Oregon Department of Planning and Development.

Glennen also reported that NASA is planning "an early demonstration" of the fasibility of very light active-repeater communications satellites in orbit 3,000 to 5,600 miles above the earth. Active-repeaters are satellites with equipment to receive, store, and relay messages.

Meanwhile, he said, NASA will work with private companies planning commercial communications projects in space.

"This means," he said, "that NASA will, to the extent of its statutory authority, make vehicles, launching and tracking facilities, and technical services available at cost to private companies."

He said this would be done "provided the private plans for the development and commercial utilization of communication satellites are technically promising and in general consonance with the requirements of other licensing bodies."

No Reason To Change

Glenn said he saw no reason to change past policy of permitting private, competing companies to finance and operate communications systems under federal controls.

"It is clear, however, that such activities involving the launching of vehicles into outer space must be regulated in the public interest, even during the stages of development testing," he said.

Industrial Stocks Off More Than Point in First Hour of Dealing
