Sacred Heart Hospital Decision Followed Long, Careful Study

No staff member will be thrown out of work immediately because of the impending closure, Sister Luke emphasized.

"This decision, to eventually close Sacred Heart hospital, was a difficult one," she said. "We did it only after long and careful study. We also think this is the only solution for the good of the community."

New Wing Planned

The new wing at Rogue Valley, to house some 65 beds, will be constructed if and when federal Hill - Burton funds become available. The bulk of the non-federal funds already have been pledged to the project by the donor who contributed the largest single amount for the construction of Rogue Valley hospital.

Sacred Heart was built by St. Vincent hospital in Portland. Except for the recent drive, no public funds have ever been solicited or received, Sister Luke said. Only gifts have consisted of yearly donations of equipment.

Caring for Aged Lifelong Process

Washington-Science Service)-Old people must be protected from the three D's - disease, disability and dependency. And prevention of these ills does not begin at 65; it is a lifelong process, Dr. Claire F. Ryder of the division of special health services, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, told delegates at the Nation Recreation Congress meeting here.

How the older person will utilize the increasing amounts of leisure time at his disposal, Dr. Ryder said, will depend on his own and his family's attitudes, the community's attitudes, his preparation for retirement, his own basic resources, his financial and living conditions and his physical condition.

Proper use of leisure time is a preventive to help forestall the onset of dependency. And recreation can be a bridge between the young and the old.

Oriente Province 'Invaders' Stand Trial in Santiago

Havana-(UPI)-Twenty-one "invaders" of Oriente Province, including one described as an American, were to go on trial in Santiago today in revolutionary Cuba's second big court martial of the week. The prosecution was expected to demand the death penalty for more defendants at Santiago than at Santa Clara, where a "revolutionary tribunal" already in session has been asked to send five of 130 prisoners to the firing squad.

The American among the Santiago defendants was identified as Anthony Zarba of Boston. The government said three other U.S. citizens - identified only as Allen D. Thompson, Robert Fuller and Paul Hughes - were among five or six "invaders" still at large.

Reports from elsewhere in Cuba said 13 foes of Premier Fidel Castro were arrested Tuesday in Matanzas Province, East of Havana, and jailed at San Severino. There was no indication how soon they would face trial.

Troops in Matanzas also were pursuing eight Castro foes accused of shooting up an Army-type jeep Tuesday, killing a child and wounding a woman, and trying to set fire to a truckload of cattle.

Capt. Juan Escalona, prosecutor at the military trial in Santa Clara, asked the court at its opening Tuesday to impose the death penalty on Maj. Sinesio Walsh and Piliño Prieto, ex-members of Castro's Army, Porfirio Ramirez, Jose Palomino and Rene Salas.

Although it was announced that the Santa Clara trial would be open to the press, the prosecutor excluded American and European newsmen because, according to a guard, he was "tired of reading U.S. reporters' lies."

It was reported that correspondents and photographers from Russia and other Iron Curtain countries were welcomed in the courtroom.

Forand Bill Extension of What FDR Did - Sweetland

Sweetland is running for the Secretary of State's office now held by Republican Howell Appling Jr., a Hatfield appointee, who is campaigning for reelection.

Sweetland said the Forand bill is an extension of what President Roosevelt did under the Social Security program. He said, "but to hear Republicans talk, you'd think they proposed it" (Social Security).

The Forand bill would let the medical care for the aged in with the Social Security program, he said, and added that employer and employee alike would pay only "one-quarter of one per cent" more than they are now into the program.

For those elderly persons who are not under Social Security, he said, it is proposed that they receive direct federal aid in combination with interest on the Social Security fund for medical care purposes.

Sweetland charged that the Republicans, "who basically want to do nothing," have, because of public pressure, come up with a program that "is a complete farce and fraud on old people."

They would propose that medical care for the aged be tied into the various states' welfare programs with the federal government matching state contributions in this respect.

Doesn't Like Idea
To qualify under this program, he said, a person would have to completely "exhaust his resources." Sweetland said he doesn't like the idea of having persons have to qualify for welfare before they could receive the medical care benefits.

This is the proposal of the Republicans, he said, even though they claim they want people to be "self-sufficient."

Yet his opponent, who, he said, "is great on attack and great on denunciation," but who does little else, "is denouncing me for being for the Forand bill."

California Woman Said Slightly Better

The condition of Annie G. Paige, 87, Kentfield, Calif., who was seriously injured in a car-trailer accident near Phoenix Friday was reported slightly improved today, according to Rogue Valley hospital attendants.

Her condition was reported as critical last week end. She is suffering from a broken leg, multiple bruises and broken ribs. She was a passenger in the car driven by 83-year-old Mary Violet Thomas, also of Kentfield. Mrs. Thomas was killed when a trailer pulled by another car broke loose and hit her car.
