

Japanese Security Chief Forced Out By Demonstrators

Tokyo—Violent left-wing and Communist protests over the assassination of Socialist party Chairman Inejiro Asanuma forced the resignation of Japan's security chief today and threatened the stability of the government itself.

Two thousand policemen armed with clubs and pistols and backed up by a dozen armored trucks scattered groups of fanatical Zengakuren students who tried to mount new demonstrations outside Parliament and Premier Hayato Ikeda's home.

By threatening arrests and ordering the demonstrators to "keep moving" they hoped to head off a buildup to the type of massive bloody riots that forced cancellation of President Eisenhower's visit last June and ultimately led to the resignation of Premier Nobusuke Kishi.

Ikeda, hoping to escape the same fate, met with his cabinet and accepted the resignation of his anti-Communist state police minister, Iwao Yamazaki. The security chief was a member of the prewar jingoist "Political Friends Association" and was purged from politics by U.S. occupation authorities.

Student Stabs Asanuma

Asanuma, an outspoken foe of the U.S.-Japan military pact and friendly toward Communist China, was stabbed to death before the eyes of Ikeda and about 1,000 other horrified persons during a political rally here Wednesday night. His assassin was a 17-year-old ultra-nationalist student, Otoyama Yamaguchi.
