Candidate Speaks At Three Coffees In Area in Week

John Dellenback, Republican candidate for state representative, discussed Measure 14 to appear on the November ballot, the role of the state representative and the distribution of O and C funds at three coffee hours this week.

Monday's event was held at the R. J. Cunningham home, 24 North Groveland ave., with Mrs. Cunningham and Mrs. W. E. Hercher, hostesses.

He said that he was against and will work to defeat any measure which is designed to raise more revenues for the state than are necessary. Measure 14 would increase the total income taxes paid by state residents, he said.

Speaking at a coffee hour at the Joseph R. Krupp home, 2079 Taylor rd., Central Point, the candidate said that a state representative should be free to represent all people and be committed to specific stands on issues. Mrs. Krupp and Mrs. Don Bohnert were hostesses.

Chester Rapp, Republican candidate for county treasurer, and Dellenback shared the discussion during a coffee hour Tuesday at the Talent home of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Beebe.

Dellenback stressed the need to have individuals in the government who would defend individual rights and to maintain the competitive system.

He added that once a percentage of O and C funds are taken by the rest of the state the share will increase until property taxes here become burdensome.

Hostesses for the coffee were Mrs. Beebe, Mrs. Bruce Cyphers, and Mrs. W. R. Bagley.

New Technique Opens Study of Malformations

New York (Science Service) - For the first time scientists have demonstrated that completely reshuffled cells, taken from the liver or kidney of chick embryos, can reconstruct the same organ without outside direction.

The new technique opens the possibility of further explorations by biologists who may use it as a clue to understanding disturbances of self-organization that lead to malformations and tumors.

Two Rockefeller Institute scientists, Drs. Paul A. Weiss and A. Cecil Taylor, report in the current Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences (Sept.) that they incubated the cells of each organ for a brief period in pancreatin, an enzymatic extract of the pancreas.

Bodily Movement
The chick embryos from which the organs were removed were from eight to 14 days of age, and were developed sufficiently to have bodily movement. (It takes approximately 21 days to hatch a chick egg.)

The scientists scrambled the cells from the removed organs (after stripping them of physiological "glue" that binds them together) into a random mass and placed this on the surrounding membrane of eight-day-old chick embryos left to grow in their shells.

After nine days of development, the professors removed the transplanted mass and studied sections under the microscope. They discovered typical miniature organs from which the cells had been taken.

Blood Supply Identified
Whatever the blood supply and chick membrane may have contributed to the advanced development of the formations they "certainly could have added nothing to make the liver cells reconstitute a typical liver; the kidney cells, a typical kidney; and the skin cells, feathers," the investigators observe. The blood supply and place of development were identical for all of them.

Dr. Weiss advanced original arguments for the "self-organization" theory during the 1920s. The results just announced are the culmination of research started in 1950 in cooperation with Dr. Gert Andres, now of the University of Mainz, Germany.

Other investigations have shown reconstruction of dissociated cells at the tissue level, but none have demonstrated reconstruction of such complex organs as Drs. Weiss and Taylor have reported.

SPEAKER - Herbert Alstadt, senior vice president and chief counsel for Title and Trust company, Portland, will speak at a meeting of the Medford Realty Board in the Pioneer room in the Jackson hotel Friday noon. His subject will be "The Other Side of the Ledger," a discussion of title losses. He is a member of the Portland Board of Realtors, the Oregon State Real Estate board, the Oregon State Bar and the Portland Home Builders association.

Teachers May Have To Meet Demands of Child

Washington (Science Service) - Teachers may have to adapt present methods of instruction to recognize a new demand of the imaginative, creative child, a University of Chicago educator said here.

The "creativity quotient" of the child must be measured as well as his intelligence quotient, Prof. J. W. Getzels stated at a news conference with Lawrence G. Derthick, U. S. commissioner of education. Tests that will show this ability should be devised, he said.

Dr. Derthick noted that we "may be losing as much as 70 per cent of these gifted, creative children" by failure to recognize them in the homes as well as in schools.

Report on Progress
The commissioner called the news conference to report on progress made in research on gifted and superior children sponsored by the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. He predicted that educational changes in the next ten years as a consequence of current findings would be far greater than those that have occurred in his history.

Creative abilities show a sharp drop in the fourth grade, it was reported. This fourth grade slump is born out by continuing surveys over the past several years by Science Service of science interests of students.
