Mikoyan Believed Falling Out Of Place in Soviet Hierarchy

London—(UPI)—Soviet First Deputy Premier Anastas Mikoyan is in eclipse, according to diplomatic dispatches reaching London today.

The reports said the "Armenian wizard" of the Kremlin has faded out of the Soviet hierarchy's major activities lately.

There are growing indications Mikoyan may be on his way out of power altogether, the dispatches said. One indication that Mikoyan appears to be slipping came in the latest issue of the Soviet bimonthly history of the Soviet Communist Party.

The publication describes the history of the Armenian Communist Party without once mentioning Mikoyan's name.

Previous Soviet histories of the Armenian party gave top billing to Mikoyan. They used to call him one of the party's first heroes.

Mikoyan was not among the legion of Kremlin leaders who welcomed Premier Nikita Khrushchev in Moscow on his return from New York today.

Soviet Premier member Dimitri Polyansky told newsmen Mikoyan was on vacation.

Mikoyan also was absent from among Soviet leaders who clustered at Moscow's airport when Khrushchev flew home from a Far East trip last April. Omission of leading Soviet figures from official party publications in the past has heralded their eclipse or downfall.

The reasons and circumstances for Mikoyan's apparent fall remained shrouded in mystery thus far.

Mikoyan became Khrushchev's first deputy after the ouster of Nikolai Bulganin from the Soviet premiership in March, 1958. He became Khrushchev's prime trouble shooter in the ensuing years and smoothed the path for the temperamental Soviet premier when he preceded Khrushchev's visit to the United States.

A strong advocate of the peaceful coexistence policy, he was known to have encountered Red China's wrath of late. But there is no evidence at present that his reported eclipse is in any way connected with the Sino-Russian conflict.

At Odds With Nixon
Norbald agreed he was at odds with Vice President Richard Nixon on the need for compulsory arbitration in labor disputes. He said he favored it as a means of bringing about settlement of major strikes. Nixon opposed compulsory arbitration in his TV debate Thursday night.

Norbald said he felt the foreign aid program should be limited. He said he opposed sending experts to Japan to build up what already was an industrial giant to compete with this country. Owens said he favored expansion of the foreign aid program and would continue to send experts to Japan. He also called for cultural exchanges with other nations, including Russia.

Smith Hits World Court
Smith said he would be opposed to submitting all controversies between nations to a world court. He said he would not want to commit the free world to a court which included Russians.

Appling and Sweetland differed on the value of the State Board of Control. Appling said it made available a wider range of experience. Sweetland felt it allowed "buck passing" which prevented people from pinpointing responsibility.

Belton and Cook differed on the value of a bond commission. Belton said he would have no objection to reestablishment of the commission while Cook said he voted to abolish it at the last legislature and saw no reason to support it now.

Thornton defended his record as attorney general and said a lack of funds from the legislature had slowed work on a crime prevention program. Francis criticized Thornton's record.

Appleton, Wis.—(UPI)—Police pondered today how they should charge five teen-agers who put on of their number in a laundromat drying machine for a lark.

Police found a 17-year-old girl happily tumbling in the 37-pound capacity machine after they had received an anonymous telephone call saying there was something unusual taking place at the self-service laundromat. The girl's companions, two 17-year-old boys and 17 and 16-year-old girls, had already left.

Calling White House newsmen into his office later for an exchange of greetings, the President shook hands all around and laughed heartily at the press room's birthday card. It showed on its front an Indian fakir performing the traditional rope trick. "It's quite a trick," the message read on the front page, and on the inside, "The way you stay so young."

A reporter asked how the President planned to spend his next 70 years.

The President grinned his famous grin and his eyes sparkled. Then, becoming a little serious, he said, "You know, sometimes it's terrifying to think about retirement."

In Excellent Health
As has been his daily practice since his recovery from a 1955 heart attack, the President rose early. He pronounced himself "feeling fine," a verdict confirming the most recent finding of his doctors who have said his health is excellent.

The President's birthday schedule included a visit from a group of Republican campaign workers who brought him a basket of 70 red roses, each tagged with a card referring to an event on each of his birthday anniversaries.

In addition, the President marked the occasion with a full schedule of official business and plans for a family fun fest at his farm home in Gettysburg, Pa.

He declared: "It is not admirable to have a lot of children. We can't compete with rabbits anyway. "A person with five or six or eight children should be considered highly irresponsible socially. "Having that many children makes it increasingly difficult for the human race to survive."

Senator Morse To Be in State For Four Talks

By United Press International
Visits by Sen. Estes Kefauver, (D-Tenn.), to plug Democratic candidates and by Thomas E. Dewey to speak for the Republicans are scheduled in Oregon next week.

Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore.), also will be in the state Oct. 22-24 to speak in all four congressional districts.

Kefauver will speak Tuesday night in Pendleton and on Wednesday the 1956 Democratic presidential nominee is scheduled to speak in Redmond and Bend.

Dewey, twice the GOP presidential nominee, will arrive in Portland next Friday afternoon. He will speak that night to an Associated General Contractors banquet in Portland and will campaign in Hillsboro and Eugene the next day for Elmo Smith, Republican senatorial candidate.

Morse will speak in The Dalles next Saturday evening and on Sunday will speak in Hillsboro and Eugene. On Monday he will address a union group in Portland before flying back to New York.

Candidates in Corvallis
Most major candidates for statewide office appeared at Gill Coliseum in Corvallis Thursday night. They included Smith, Rep. Walter Norblad and Mary Owens, rivals for Congress from the 1st district; Attorney General Robert Y. Thornton and his GOP opponent, Sen. Carl Francis; Secretary of State Howell Appling and his Democratic rival, Monroe Sweetland, and State Treasurer Howard Belton and his Democratic opponent, State Sen. Ward Cook. Mrs. Maurine Neuberger, Democratic nominee for the Senate, was unable to appear because of a prior engagement in Eugene.

OLDEST PRESIDENT—President Eisenhower today became the oldest president in the history of the United States, eclipsing the age-in-office record previously held by Andrew Jackson, The Chief Executive became 70 Thursday. (UPI Telephoto)

President Observes 70th Anniversary; Faces Busy Schedule

Washington—(UPI)—President Eisenhower celebrated his 70th birthday anniversary today—the first U.S. president to do so in office—and admitted that the prospect of retirement sometimes was rather terrifying.

But the President indicated he won't have much time to think about retirement in the period immediately after he leaves office Jan. 20. He told reporters he has had more demands on his time for the first six months after he leaves office than he has had during almost eight years in the White House.

Eisenhower marked his milestone in high spirits and apparently in the best of health.

Serenaded by Band
Meeting with newsmen in his office, he was gay and, at times, a little sentimental. There were indications he may have shed a private tear or two when the Army Band and Chorus, serenading him from the south lawn of the White House, rendered "Army Blue," the traditional song of West Point cadets about to trade their cadet greys for Army blues.

The President, who already had thanked the bandmen for their early morning birthday tribute, was reported to have choked up when he heard the selection. Anyway, he turned at its conclusion and beat a hasty retreat into the White House.

Calling White House newsmen into his office later for an exchange of greetings, the President shook hands all around and laughed heartily at the press room's birthday card. It showed on its front an Indian fakir performing the traditional rope trick. "It's quite a trick," the message read on the front page, and on the inside, "The way you stay so young."

A reporter asked how the President planned to spend his next 70 years.

Mankind Claimed Threatened by Population Burst

Portland—Mankind is threatening its own existence by uncontrolled breeding.

Such is the warning left in Portland by Dr. Brock Chisholm of Victoria, B.C., first director general of the World Health Organization, who spoke at the First Unitarian church.

"The population explosion is more dangerous than the chances of war," declared the white-haired psychiatrist.

Dr. Chisholm warned that a nuclear war would mean the "end of civilization as we know it" and pointed out: "There is more than enough destructive capacity in the world to kill everybody in the world."

Not Taken Seriously
But he expressed belief that "there is a good chance we'll avoid war," whereas "the population is here now, and there is no indication that the human race has taken it seriously."

Dr. Chisholm said United Nations figures show that the world's population will increase more in the next 40 years than it did "in the last 200,000 years."

Some countries, like Mexico, will see their population double in the next 21 years, said the soft-spoken expert.

"The population of the world is now almost 3 billion," Dr. Chisholm reported. "By the end of the century it will be at least 6 billion."

"More than half the people of the world are suffering now because of lack of food. There is no prospect of providing food, clothing and the amenities of life for 6 billion people."

Land Short
"And in short while it will be a matter of space, too. The U.N. reports that if the population explosion continues at the present rate of 600 years there will be one square meter of land (slightly more than a square yard) in the world per person. That includes mountain peaks."

To meet the problem, the medical expert urged a "new climate of public opinion over the world" which would encourage limitation of the number of children born in each family.

He declared: "It is not admirable to have a lot of children. We can't compete with rabbits anyway. "A person with five or six or eight children should be considered highly irresponsible socially. "Having that many children makes it increasingly difficult for the human race to survive."
