Eisenhower Meets African Leaders

Washington - (UPI) - President Eisenhower said Friday in an obvious jab at Nikita Khrushchev that the United States must never let threats and provocations interfere with efforts to seek friendships with Asian and African nations.

The Chief Executive made the statement in the wake of a meeting at which he extended the hand of friendship to representatives of 16 newly independent nations recently admitted to the United Nations-Cyprus and 15 African countries.

Eisenhower appealed to the African leaders at the White House session to resist Communist attempts to subvert or dominate their nations.

Cottage Grove Boys Injured in Collision

Cottage Grove - (UPI) - Two Cottage Grove teen agers were seriously injured Thursday night in a car-train crash at the Harvey Road railroad crossing here.

Injured were Guy West, 16, driver of the car, and Edward Peabody, also 16, a passenger. They were injured when the car in which they were riding collided with a freight train.

Small Worlds Around Us
By Lynn M. Watkins

This Exodus Has Never Been Explained
It was one of those sudden summer storms that seemingly comes from nowhere. The sun was shining brightly, then it wasn't; a dark cloud formed overhead.

The housewife whipped her clothes off the line and started for the house, one eye on the black clouds tumbling overhead.

Half way to the back porch her attention was suddenly attracted by a movement in the grass ahead of her. A little frightened, she stopped. Moving at right angles to her own direction was a crowd of tiny creatures scurrying helter-skelter through the grass. It was a minute or so before she recognized what they were; when she did she could hardly believe her eyes. What appeared to be several dozen chameleons were scampering over the lawn.

Tumbled Along
While she stood there, transfixed by the mass movement of little reptiles, some of them, on the outer edge of the moving throng, crawled across her feet. Some actually were tumbling over one another in their mad haste. Realizing she was witnessing something strangely unusual, she began noticing individual chameleons in the hurrying horde.

There were large, full-grown ones, medium-sized ones, and many not over an inch in length. There were some that were dark colored, some leaf-green, and some even with oddly colored tails, indicating that at some unfortunate time the little creature had lost its tail and had grown a new one.

It took several minutes before the last of the group scampered past and disappeared into a flower bed at the far side of the garden. Then the back yard was bare of movement; the last little scampering reptile had gone.

Holding tightly to the fluttering clothes, the lady reentered the house just as the rain began pattering on the roof. With the rain came the stronger gusts of the wind. The lady, now safe inside, wondered about the fleeing chameleons. Others that have heard about it wonder, too.

The reason so many of them were moving together, and all in the same direction, all responding to the same impulse, is difficult to understand. The obvious reason would seem to be "migration" or an organized exodus to some supposed place of safety, either to avoid the storm or because the pressure of numbers made a trip necessary.

Do Not Migrate
But chameleons do not naturally migrate, so the very obvious reasons are not necessarily the real cause. Even if they were frightened by the impending storm, just how did so many of them get together? How or why did they decide to move toward the same destination? It is unusual, even where these tiny reptiles are common, to see more than two or three in any one location.

So, once again, we have a true but strange situation; a "thundering herd" is sometimes a silent exodus of little creatures rushing toward some destiny about which we can only guess.
