

Quoting the Candidates

By United Press International

Vice President Richard M. Nixon: "In the event that such an attack occurred (against the Chinese nationalist-held offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu), and in the event the attack was a prelude to an attack of Formosa, which would be the indication to today, because the Chinese Communists say... they consider them only stepping stones to taking Formosa... there isn't any question but that the United States would stand by our ally of Formosa."

"To do what Sen. Kennedy has suggested, to suggest that we will surrender these islands or force our Chinese Nationalist allies to surrender them in advance is not something that would lead to peace. It is something that would lead, in my opinion, to war. This is the history of dealing with dictators. This is something that Sen. Kennedy and all Americans must know. We tried this with Hitler. It didn't work."

"Of course, both Sen. Kennedy and I have felt Mr. Truman's ire... We all have tempers... But when a man is president of the United States, or a former president, he has an obligation not to lose his temper in public."

"Their isn't any question but that we must move forward in every possible way to reduce the danger of war, to move toward controlled disarmament, to control tests. But also, let's have in mind this: When Sen. Kennedy suggests that we have not been making an effort, he simply does not know what he is talking about. We have certainly gone the extra mile and then some in making offers to the Soviet Union on control of tests, on disarmament and in every other way... But under no circumstances must the United States ever make an agreement based on trust. There must be an absolute guarantee."

Sen. John F. Kennedy: "The United States now has a treaty which I voted for in the United States Senate in 1955 to defend Formosa and the Pescadores Islands. The islands which Mr. Nixon is discussing (Quemoy and Matsu) are five or four miles respectively off the coast of China. President Eisenhower wrote the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in October, 1958: 'Neither you nor any other American need feel the U.S. will be involved in military hostilities merely in the defense of Quemoy or Matsu."

"Now that is the issue. I believe that we must meet our commitments, and if the Chinese Communists attack the Pescadores and Formosa, they know that it will mean war... But the treaty does not include Quemoy and Matsu."

"Well, I must say that Mr. Truman has his methods of expressing things. (Truman recently called Nixon a "liar" and said Republicans could "go to hell" if they expected an apology.) They are not my style, but I really do not think there is anything that I can say to President Truman that is going to cause him at the age of 76 to change his particular speaking manner. Perhaps Mrs. Truman can..."

"On the question of disarmament, particularly nuclear disarmament, I must say that I feel that another effort should be made by a new administration in January of 1961 to renew negotiations with the Soviet Union and see whether it is possible to come to some conclusion which will lessen the chances that other powers will begin to possess a nuclear capacity. I don't feel a real effort has been made on this very sensitive subject not only of nuclear controls but also of general disarmament. These must be done."

"I have suggested that the President should be given other weapons to protect the national interest in case of national emergency strikes beyond the injunction provision of the Taft-Hartley Act... Not only the fact-finding committee... not only the injunction, but also the power of the fact-finding commission to make recommendations."

Students Score High on Tests

Two Crater High school students and one Phoenix High school student ranked high in the National Merit Scholarship qualifying test.

Steve D. Howell and John W. Doherty, both of Crater High school, have been honored for outstanding performance on the National Merit Scholarship qualifying test. Betty McAlaster, Phoenix High school senior, has received a letter of commendation from the corporation for superior performance in the test taken last spring.

The students will be eligible for applying for college scholarships awarded through the corporation, school officials explained. Students in the United States receiving such notification make up less than 3 per cent of all secondary school seniors.

Belton Points To Opponent's Vote

Portland - (UPI) - Republican State Treasurer Howard C. Belton said Friday that the legislative record of his Democratic opponent for state treasurer, State Sen. Ward Cook, Portland, "proves he has aligned himself with the spenders in the state legislature and should not be considered a conservative in his use of tax dollars."

In an address prepared for delivery tonight to the Peninsula Club of the Oregon Federation of Republican Women, Belton said that when Cook was chairman of the 1959 Senate Tax committee he voted in favor of House Bill 670 "which would have brought an increase of from $12 to $20 million dollars in the income taxes paid by Oregon citizens."

"On vote after vote when my opponent has had the opportunity to follow the course of either saving or spending, he has traveled the low road with the spenders of this state," Belton said.

Thirty BLM Employees Taking Extension Class

Thirty bureau of land management employees are attending a class on personnel management at the Medford district office. The class is being conducted by Arthur Blakeney, who is on the staff of the general extension division of the Oregon state system of higher education.

It is held Monday afternoons and evenings.

According to District Manager Ross A. Youngblood, arrangements for a series of four courses were made in the early summer with Don Low, consultant at University of Oregon in business and industrial services for the general extension division.

Each course consists of thirty class hours in six-hour sessions, with a dinner break in the middle of the session of about one and a half hours.

In Human Relations

The four series of courses are all in the field of personnel management and human relations. Purpose of the school is to bring the participants current with the latest action and developments in the personnel management field and to sharpen the participants' thinking in this vital area.

Generally, the program is designed to broaden participants' perspective, hoping to open up the door of each individual for continued growth.

Persons engaged in public service work must be dynamic, and continued growth, particularly in the human relations field, is requisite to dynamics, Youngblood noted.

Blakeney's education and experience background fit him well as instructor for this series. He acquired a master's degree in 1947 from the University of New Brunswick, Canada. An arts degree is in the field of languages.

Obtains Master's

In 1954, Blakeney obtained a master of business administration from Harvard university; from this he spent three years as director of training for the Crown-Zellerbach corporation of Canada; and from 1957 through 1959, as assistant professor of business administration at Oregon State.

This past summer he transferred to the general extension division.

Bureau of land management participants who complete all four courses will receive a certificate of completion. College graduates will, in addition, earn regular credits which may later be used in completing a master's degree in a related field.

While this management development program was scheduled for employees of the bureau of land management, doubtless a similar series can be program for any local group, Youngblood said. Charles Ivy, extension division director at Southern Oregon college, who is counseling the Medford BLM group, can be contacted for information.
