Yanks Hope Casey Will Come Back

New York—(UPI)—Casey Stengel's career as manager of the New York Yankees may be over but his players hope it isn't. That was clear when Yankees who straggled into the Yankee Stadium clubhouse to pick up personal belongings agreed to a man they hoped "the Old Man stays over."

Asked point-blank, outfielder Hector Lopez said: "I believe every player on the club hopes he'll be with us again next year." Stengel remained incommunicado at his hotel while increased and unconfirmed reports circulated that he will resign under pressure from co-owners Dan Topping and Del Webb solely on the grounds of his age, 70. One report had coach Ralph Houk already notified he will be the new manager but a Yankee spokesman said there will be word on the situation for a few days. "We won't have anything to announce on the Stengel situation for several days," he said.

Orioles Release Three Players

Baltimore—(UPI)—The Baltimore Orioles have started their post-season "house cleaning" by releasing outfielders Dave Philley and Jim Busby and catcher Del Rice. Together, the three players totaled 42 years of major league service. Rice broke in with the St. Louis Cardinals in 1945, Philley became a regular with the Chicago White Sox in 1946 and Busby made his major league debut with the White Sox in 1950. Philley, 40, joined the Orioles on Sept. 1 and batted .265 in 14 games. Rice, 38, appeared in only one game and did not have an official at-bat after joining Baltimore Sept. 7 as a free agent.

Busby, 33, batted .258 in 80 games with the Orioles following his acquisition from Miami of the International league in June.

Wolverines Score Late TD for Win

Ann Arbor, Mich.—(UPI)—Quarterback Dave Glinka's long pass got by three lunging Northwestern defenders and bounced into the arms of end Bob Johnson for a 50-yard gain that set up Michigan's winning touchdown in a 14-7 Big Ten victory over the Wildcats Saturday.

Benson Takes Self Out as Campaigner For GOP Candidates

Washington—(UPI)—Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson is out as a GOP political campaigner in the 1960 presidential race. "Nobody look him out of the campaign," a Benson aide told United Press International. "He took himself out. It was his own decision."

In the 1956 campaign Benson made dozens of speeches for President Eisenhower and criss-crossed the country in behalf of the Republican ticket.

Differ on Policy
The situation is now different, Benson and Vice President Richard M. Nixon, the GOP Presidential candidate, differ on farm policy to such an extent that Nixon has not asked him to campaign. Some Republicans are said to regard Benson as a political liability because of his farm policies.

About three weeks ago, according to the aide, Benson decided he would not accept bids to make speeches from partisan political platforms. "This does not mean he will sit out the campaign," the aide said. "The Secretary believes he will be more effective if he speaks from non-partisan platforms to persons of all political faiths. He will be expressing his own fundamental beliefs."

"But he will not avoid political issues. For example, in news conferences he will meet political questions with political answers. He will not dodge any questions." Before the Republican National convention, Benson voiced a preference for New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller as the party's candidate. This undoubtedly did not endear him to Nixon.

The aide said Benson had no fear of Nixon farm policies, and that he believed the Vice President would make an "economically sound" president.

After his decision to stay out of the political platform, Benson canceled what his aide said were "several" tentative dates to speak in behalf of Republican Congressional candidates. Prior to the decision, Benson made one political speech—at a Labor Day rally in Richmond, Va.

Going to South America
Benson has a speaking date Oct. 19 at the annual meeting of the Michigan State Grange in East Lansing. The next day, he will take off for a trade and good will trip to South America. He will return to the United States Nov. 3 in time to make a speech that day to the National Association of County Agricultural Agents in Miami Beach, Fla.

On Nov. 4 he is scheduled to speak before the annual meeting of the Poultry Producers association in Versailles, Ohio.

That schedule leaves little time to speak from political platforms before the Nov. 8 election.

United Nations, N.Y.—(UPI)—India and 14 smaller nations moved today to shore up the United Nations as a means of cooling East-West tempers and bringing peace to the world.

A draft resolution to be presented to the General Assembly today by Indian Defense Minister V. K. Krishna Menon expressed alarm over the "deterioration in international relations."

It urged all countries to refrain from any actions likely to worsen tensions, to cooperate with the United Nations, and take "immediate and constructive steps" toward solving world problems.

The resolution grew out of the tumult caused by Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev during the opening days of the current assembly. The sponsors of the generally worded peace resolution were India, Indonesia, Ghana, the United Arab Republic, Yugoslavia, Austria, Bolivia, Burma, Ecuador, Finland, Mexico, Morocco, Panama, Tunisia and Venezuela.
