Roseburg Woman Speaks For Medford Republicans

A talk on "politics, generally," on behalf of Elmo Smith, Republican candidate for United States senator, was given to local Republican women Monday by Mrs. Paul Geddes, Roseburg.

Mrs. Geddes, wife of a former state representative, senator and candidate for United States representative, spoke at a luncheon of the Jackson County Federation of Republican Women at Girls Community club.

She was introduced by Mrs. Harold Strawn, Portland, president of the Federation of Republican Women of Oregon.

Mrs. Geddes, mother of six daughters and a writer and television performer, referred to the "sly methods" used in political campaigns to destroy an opponent. She said she sometimes felt that the parties "were more interested in creating an image, than in revealing a personality."

"Many legislators with good intentions have entered very bad bills," she declared, "and others have defeated them, not because they disagreed with the cause, but because they were bad bills."

She gave as an example, Smith's one vote against a billboard restriction bill, which she said is now used against him in the campaign. His opposition fails to report that he voted for three "better" billboard bills, according to Mrs. Geddes.

She said other misconceptions concerning Smith include charges that he is against conservation, although he "pioneered" the water conservation system adopted by the state legislature; that he is against civil rights, although he won a national citation for his protection of rights of Japanese Americans during World War II; and that he has changed his mind about some issues.

"What kind of man would it be, who couldn't change his opinion when situations change?" Mrs. Geddes asked.

Mrs. Maurine Neuberger, Democratic candidate for senator, was criticized for her recent negative reply to a question concerning risking nuclear war for West Berlin or Formosa, and also for the impression that she was responsible for passage of legislation in Oregon legalizing the sale of colored oleomargarine.

Referring to a survey in Tillamook county which shows Neuberger and Nixon leading in the campaign, the Roseburg campaigner said a victorious Richard Nixon will need a Republican congress which might be joined by southern Democrats. And if Kennedy wins, she said, Republicans in congress "must stem the socialist tide."

Mrs. Strawn spoke on behalf of all Republican candidates. She reported that there are now 41 active Republican women's organization in Oregon with about 5,000 women volunteers.

New York—Tomi Keitlin says she's blind. She has a seeing-eye dog, Duchess, as a constant companion. Despite her affliction, Mrs. Keitlin takes pictures, motion and still. She also rides, skis, climbs mountains, and is business manager and vice-president of a New York firm. (UPI Telephoto)

Photography Is Hobby for Blind Woman; Rides, Skis

By PATRICIA McCORMACK United Press International New York—Tomi Keitlin says she's blind.

She wears dark glasses and if you want further proof, she takes the glasses off and shows you one scarred pit where an eye used to be. The second eye is fogged over.

And if you still act like you're from Missouri, there's her seeing-eye dog—a constant companion—to consider.

The thing that makes you search for this extra proof is that this woman doesn't act like a woman who lives in darkness.

When she talks to you, for example, she looks you in the eye—at least she goes through the motions quite well, just as she did in the days before a virus infection, touched off by an accident, dimmed her world.

Mrs. Keitlin was 32 when she left her desk at home to run to the nursery to quiet her young daughter. She took along a pencil that fateful day eight years ago.

While she was patting her daughter, Phyllis, to sleep, Mrs. Keitlin stabbed herself in the eye with the pencil. Her eye hurt like your hand does when you burn it on the iron.

The injured eye puffed. The pain became more intense. Some time later, Mrs. Keitlin lost that eye. Then the infection that invaded the injured eye attacked her other eye. She lost the sight in that one.

She was 33 when total darkness struck. She went through the symphony of sorrow that strikes one newly-handicapped—self-pity, withdrawal from the world, bitterness.

But then something within launched Mrs. Keitlin into a purposeful kind of life. A life in which accent is on ability and there's a playing down of disability. All of this she quickly tells you when you talk to her.

"It's something like what William O. Douglas wrote in 'Of Men and Mountains,' Mrs. Keitlin said when asked to explain what stopped her on the descent.

"He wrote," she said, "That 'when man knows how to live dangerously, he is not afraid to die. When he is not afraid to die, he is, strangely, free to live.' And that's the way it's been with me."

Mrs. Keitlin's daughter now is a teenager in a private school outside of New York.

Her work takes her on cross-country tours several times a year—speaking engagements mostly.

The thing that's most fantastic about the life that Mrs. Keitlin leads is her hobbies. She climbs mountains, skis, rides horses and takes pictures—motion and still.

She participated in research aimed at proving how well the electric eye on a camera (Bell and Howell) works. The pictures are in color and they are perfect.

"It's no problem taking pictures," she said, "when you use your other senses. I can tell about the shadows by feeling the intensity of the sun's heat on my face.

"And I pace out the distance between my subjects and the camera to get the pictures properly framed."

Mrs. Ruth Klippstein, extension nutritionist, describes the new booklet as a valuable aid to persons with special diet problems, or to their advisers—physicians, dietitians and nutritionists. Food values of about 500 foods are listed in the bulletin.

Readers can compare caloric value of ice cream and ice milk, creamed and uncreamed cottage cheese, and study food values of five popular forms of orange juice.

One table is suggested as a guide to shoppers in determining amount of raw meat to buy in order to serve a given amount of cooked meat. Nutritive values are shown for only parts of food usually eaten—corn without the cob, meat without bone, potatoes with and without skins. With information provided in the booklet, meal planners will be able to calculate ways to increase certain vitamins and minerals in the diet, Mrs. Klippstein notes.

They can see at a glance how requirements for a high school age youngster and their husbands differ, and plan accordingly, she added.

Answers to these and other questions that relate to feeding the family better are found in a new bulletin made available by Oregon State college. Single copies of "Nutritive Value of Foods" may be obtained at county extension offices.

Willamette To Honor Parents

Salem (Special) - Tenth annual Willamette university parents' weekend activities are taking shape under Leander Quiring, Salem, parents' association president, and Lyle Green, Eugene, student manager.

The October 21-23 weekend is an annual get-acquainted activity for parents, students and professors. About 750 parents are expected this year.

Miss Oregon, Rosemary Doolen, Medford, Willamette sophomore, will perform in Varsity Varieties, a student talent show which will be one of the weekend's highlights. Miss Doolen, who won a $1,000 scholarship with her beautiful voice in the Miss America Pageant this year at Atlantic City, will lend her talent along with that of other Willamette students in the Varsity Varieties kickoff event Friday, October 21, at 8:15 p.m.

Events Listed Saturday, October 22, will see the annual parents' association meeting, a chicken barbecue, a chat session with professors in the library, a coffee hour, and an all-campus sing featuring two songs from campus living organizations. Capping Saturday's events will be a football game between long-time grid rivals, Willamette and Linfield college.

An "all you can eat" pancake breakfast will be served to students and parents Sunday morning, ending the weekend activities. Time has been left for parents and their sons and daughters to visit. The Salem chamber of commerce is providing free parking passes at any meter in the city during the week end.

Back to School Night Planned

"Back to School Night" will be observed by Howard school Thursday, October 20. Parents of children attending the school are invited to attend the event, one of a series of parent meetings which is part of the parent-teacher conference program carried on at the school.

Parents are to meet in their children's rooms at 7:30 p.m. for the first part of the period. Then each parent will follow his child's daily procedure for the remainder of the evening.

Refreshments will be served, and child care provided. In Miss Mary Klockner's room.

Gold Hill Couple Entertain Guests Gold Hill - Mr. and Mrs. Earl Moore had as recent guests Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Hamilton and Carl Smith, Portland, and Mrs. Daisy Stephenson, Grants Pass. Mrs. Stephenson is Mrs. Moore's mother.

Look to the future when you plan a child's room. A crib with sides that lock in place and later can be removed, a chest of drawers, a chair and a large table make a good beginning.
