way 228 in Brownsville, James Arthur Waibel, 20, Brownsville, the truck driver, was not cited.
The two deaths brought Oregon's 1960 toll to 348, according to the State Traffic Safety Commission in Salem.

Campaign Quotes

By United Press International
Son John F. Kennedy (speech to annual Alfred E. Smith memorial dinner in New York City): "There are some who say that the religious convictions of the candidates will influence the outcome of the Nov. 8 presidential election 'more than their convictions on the issues.' But 'I do not think the American voter of 1960 is the same as the American voter of 1928,' when New York Gov. Smith's Catholicism was a major issue.
"In 1960, as never before, our enemy is loose on the world." In 1928, the people could be excused for exercising prejudice "but in 1960, the citizens of this country, face the great question of whether freedom will not only endure but whether they will perish."
"The American people of 1960 see the storm coming... I am confident that whatever their verdict, their judgment will be based on the real issues of our time... what is best for our country."
Noting that even the Wall Street Journal at one point criticized Vice President Richard M. Nixon's campaign tactics: "That's the Osservatore Romano criticizing the Pope."
Vice President Richard M. Nixon (speech to Smith dinner in New York City): "Religion should not be an issue in the campaign. And it shall not be if Sen. Kennedy and I and our supporters and other men of good will, will discuss the issues." However, religion should be an issue in a presidential campaign if one of the candidates had no faith in God, because "in these times, any man who has to lead the nation and the free world must be a man with faith—faith in God—faith in the rights of man."
In the "great battle going on" for the hearts and minds of the peoples of Africa, Asia and Latin America, it is not enough for America "to go before these people and say 'communism is bad.' We must emphasize our faith, our ideals... and let it appear we are helping them because we care for them." This would be "charity in its broadest sense."
Nixon (Wilmington, Del., statement): "It took a war to solve the unemployment riddle for them" (the previous Roosevelt-Truman Democratic administrations) and Kennedy's "glowing promises" of a program of full employment "aren't worth a plugged nickel."

Morse Praises Columbia Pact

Washington — (UPI) — Sen. Wayne Morse, (D - Ore.), a member of the Senate subcommittee on Canadian affairs, today called the new Columbia river agreement one of "immense importance to the Pacific Northwest."
Morse, who is also a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said in a statement he would call for early hearings on the treaty when congress reconvenes in January.
"Such hearings will be of special importance because we must make sure that the treaty fully protects the interests of American taxpayers," Morse said.
He said he was "pleased that this has been approached on a non-political basis and it is my hope that it will lead to further agreements with Canada on a whole range of subjects."
The agreement calling for a 10-year program for development of the upper Columbia River basin was announced by President Eisenhower Wednesday.
