

RECESS... the best of time all...

Ask a child "how was school today?" and about all you can expect is a "just fine" and that, more than likely, is the end of that. If you question him further he may tell you that he got a B in arithmetic or report on some other scholarly achievement. What goes on at recess? Only pictures can tell.

Blisters on little hands come from playing on the cross bars. But who cares about a blister or two?

A fast game of hand tennis stimulates circulation after a classroom session, and it helps to have admiring onlookers.

Boys' brogans just don't respond as well to the nimble sport of jumping rope, so it is considered a "sissy" game. The secret is holding your mouth right.

Pow! Tether ball gets a lusty smack as it sails by. Most popular game of all, tether ball calls for mind-muscle coordination.

The old-fashioned swing is considered a "real neat" invention by today's youngsters.

Playful roughhouse, discouraged by teachers, accounts for missing buttons, torn pockets and sometimes bumps and bruises.
