League's Fair Is Considered Success By Local Officials

Candidates, even with modern facilities of mass communication, still prefer to meet voters personally, according to many of the comments received by the Medford League of Women Voters following Thursday night's candidates fair.

Mrs. Alice Rutter, the League's voter service committee chairman who handled arrangements for the event, said Saturday many of the candidates expressed appreciation for the opportunity of meeting the voters personally.

Many of the candidates, she said, commented that they acknowledged the possibilities of reaching thousands of people through television, radio and the newspapers, but still felt there is no substitute for meeting the voters personally.

Offer Opportunity

The candidates fairs—there were three in three nights last week—offer this opportunity to all candidates. Mrs. Rutter noted. The Grants Pass League sponsored a fair there Wednesday night, the Medford fair was Thursday night, and candidates for national and state offices attended a similar fair in Eugene Friday night.

Mrs. Rutter said the Medford League considered the fair, which was held at Hedrick Junior High school, a success, and expressed appreciation to organizations which assisted the League in staging the program and coffee session in the cafeteria.

The estimated 800 attending the fair heard Congressman Charles O. Porter, who is seeking reelection, and his Republican opponent, Dr. Edwin R. Durno, Medford, debate the question of the role of a congressman in foreign affairs.

Another Highlight

Another highlight of the fair was the discussion of talks with Russia between Mrs. Maurine Neuberger, Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate, and Ex-Gov. Elmo Smith, Republican candidate for the Senate.

Candidates for state representative from Jackson county and all county office candidates also attended the fair. In many cases it was the first time many of the candidates from either of the major political parties had met on a common stage.

Following the program in the gymnasium in which each candidate was given a certain number of minutes in which to present his qualifications and in some cases his policies, candidates were given space in the cafeteria where they could meet voters personally.

While coffee was being served by members of the Medford 20-30 Active club, candidates discussed issues, argued points and talked with voters to clarify stands or policies.

Mrs. Maurine Neuberger speaks to some 800 people about negotiations with Russians with United Nations flags serving as backdrop.

Children To Collect For Emergency Fund

A new slant on the traditional Halloween "Trick or Treat" program will be practiced for the second time this year.

Tried on a limited basis before, children knocking on doors and saying "trick or treat" will have with them boxes for donations to the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund. Aided by volunteer mothers, the money will be collected by the children and given to the United Nations through the First National Bank of Medford which has volunteered its services in the program.

To encourage the children, a movie starring Danny Kaye and titled "Assignment Children," is now making the rounds of county schools. The movie shows how UNICEF, the children's fund, operates in 34 different countries to aid needy children.

The film was sponsored by members of the Medford chapter of the Oregon United Nations association, by friends of the United Nations, and by several contributing local service clubs.

Students from Medford High school speech classes, and from Southern Oregon college give talks along with the film showings. Student body organizations at the various schools have voted to contribute to UNICEF at every school where the film has been shown.
