Portlanders Given Deportation Stay To Allow Appeal

Portland—UPI—Two Portland men facing deportation because of meetings they attended during the depression years had another ray of hope of staying in this country today. The immigration commissioner in Washington, D.C., granted a stay to William A. Mackie, 51, a house painter, and Hamish Scott MacKay, 55, a carpenter, so they could appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court. The stay is of indefinite length. Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore.), also urged President Eisenhower to grant them executive clemency. The 9th Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco Monday refused to halt their deportation. The two men, who have been battling for nearly 10 years to remain here, had been scheduled to be flown to Finland and Canada early this week. But a temporary stay by the appeals court postponed their departure. After their appeals were rejected Monday, MacKay received notice to report to the Immigration Service at 10 a.m. today for deportation to Canada. Mackie had been expected to leave for Finland next Sunday. But Tuesday's stay gave them more hope. Morse told Secretary of State Christian Herter "these two cases represent a shocking example of inhumanity to man." He pleaded with Herter to take the matter up with the president to see if executive clemency couldn't be granted. Morse introduced bills in the last session of congress to stop the deportation, but the bills were not acted upon. The two cases have been considered by administrative bodies and courts since 1952. Morse described both men as "law abiding citizens." "Both men were guilty of some indiscretion in the 1930s in that they attended some Communist-front meetings," Morse said, adding that the two strongly contend they were not Communists. Mackie was born in Finland but spent only two or three months there during his infancy, Morse said. MacKay, a native of Canada, came to the United States in 1928. Dr. Grace Roth of Albuquerque, N.M., said identifying the patient who needs treatment may be more difficult than curing him. Dr. John Eckstein of Iowa City, Iowa, reported that surgical techniques can cure high blood pressure in young children most often caused by constriction of the aorta, the body's major artery. Awards Received The Albert Lasker award for distinguished achievement in cardiovascular research was presented to Drs. Karl Paul Link of the University of Wisconsin, Irving S. Wright of Cornell university and Edgar V. Allen, senior consultant in medicine at the Mayo Clinic. Each received $2,500 from the Lasker foundation. Six Howard W. Blakeslee awards were presented for reporting progress and research in the prevention, care and treatment of heart and circulatory diseases. Recipients, each of whom receives an honorarium of $500, included: Barbara Milz, for a six-part series in the Augusta, Ga., Chronicle, describing open heart surgery. Francis Bellow, for his Fortune magazine article, "How Good Is Mr. Hurley's Diet?" Dr. H. M. Marvin, Yale university, for his book "Your Heart: A Handbook for Laymen." Book Brings Award Isaac Asimov, for his book about the circulatory system, "The Living River." "A New Life for Larry," a radio program presented by Station KMOX in St. Louis, an account of an operation inside the heart of a 5-year-old boy. "Close to the Heart," a television film presented by Station WCHS-TV of Portland, Maine, which illustrated progress in heart research. Blakeslee, former science editor of the Associated Press and a founder of the National Association of Science Writers, died of heart disease.

Hypertension Authorities See Research Payoff

St. Louis—UPI—Research is paying off in cures for patients with high blood pressure, authorities in hypertension said at the 38th annual meeting of the American Heart association. Dr. Dera Kinsey of Boston reported that drugs have cut in half the death rate due to high blood pressure. Dr. Grace Roth of Albuquerque, N.M., said identifying the patient who needs treatment may be more difficult than curing him. Dr. John Eckstein of Iowa City, Iowa, reported that surgical techniques can cure high blood pressure in young children most often caused by constriction of the aorta, the body's major artery. Agreement Near On Fifth Debate

Washington—UPI—Agents of presidential candidates John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon may reach agreement today on a proposed fifth television "great debate." Fred Scribner Jr., representing Nixon, and J. Leonard Reinsch, representing Kennedy, have conferred each day this week but have reached no decision on whether to stage another encounter. Nixon has urged that another TV debate be devoted entirely to the campaign controversy over U.S. policy on Cuba. Kennedy has said that he would be prepared to answer questions on any topic and expressed hope that Nixon would do the same. The major radio and TV networks urged Reinsch and Scribner Tuesday to agree to another program in which Kennedy and Nixon would engage in a free-wheeling exchange with no panel of questioners.

Detectives Have New Investigation

Nixon Says Soviet Using Statements

Aboard Nixon Train in Ohio—UPI—Vice President Richard M. Nixon said today that the official Soviet newspaper is making the most out of statements downgrading America that have been issued by his Democratic opponent and a twice-defeated Democratic presidential candidate Adlai E. Stevenson. "I say to my opponent to quit running America down at home and abroad," Nixon told a large crowd in Dayton where he spoke on the Court-house steps in a rain. "We are not going to move America forward by running America down," he said, referring to lengthy statements published in Pravda, the official Soviet newspaper in Moscow. He said Sen. John F. Kennedy was claiming repeatedly that "American prestige has fallen to an all-time low" and he denied flatly the validity of such charges. "This isn't new," Nixon said, "this is what Adlai Stevenson said in 1956."
