

Thai Graduates In U.S. Proving Native Loyalty

Washington—(AP) Thai students graduating from U.S. schools are proving that loyalty to native soil is stronger than the lure of high American salaries.

"All but a very few" Thai students reject offers of high-paying jobs in the United States, according to Luang Videt, educational counselor at the Thailand embassy. Videt himself, was a student in the United States 30 years ago.

A graduate engineer can earn a starting salary five times greater in the United States than in Thailand.

Attraction Great
"The attraction is quite great here," Videt said in an interview. "But we need all the men we have for the development of our country. If the student has a love for his country he must go back."

There are more than 1,000 Thai students scattered among 200 colleges and universities in 38 states. Indiana University, which has a contract with the Thai government, has 200.

Students receiving scholarships from the Thai government are required to return home upon completion of their studies which sometimes includes a brief tour of on-the-job training in U.S. industry.

For most others, the only legal restrictions on their decision to stay or go home are the U.S. Immigration laws.

Half Are Women
About half of the Thai students are women. They, as well as the men, are free to marry in the United States.

"This is something that does not concern us at all," Videt said. "It is a private matter so long as they have consent of their parents."

"We have no objection to inter-racial marriages. The world will be one some day anyway."

Videt said he has not heard of a single case of racial discrimination against Thai students during his eight months with the embassy.

Few Problems Encountered
As a matter of fact, he said, Thai students encounter few problems while studying in the United States.

Most receive extensive English training before leaving Thailand. Those who have trouble with the language when they get here receive further training at the Language Institute in Washington or Michigan State University, he said.

Some students have part-time jobs, but in most cases parents, the government, or private organizations provide the $2,800 to $4,000 needed a year by Thai students at U.S. schools.

Government officials receive full salary while they are on leave for foreign study.

Danish Collection Shows Rare Objects

New York—(Science Service)—An historic exhibition of the largest collection of Danish art ever to cross the ocean, including the oldest known examples of Danish archaeological objects, was opened by King Frederik IX and Queen Ingrid of Denmark at the Metropolitan Museum here.

Presented under the patronage of King Frederik and President Eisenhower, the exhibition covers 10,000 years of art, beginning with the tiny amber figures of a bear and a bird, carved between 8,000 and 5,000 B.C., and Stone Age battle-axes, harpoons and pottery from the same period.

From the Bronze Age are a pair of spiraling, S-shaped lurs that represent two of the world's earliest wind instruments. They are more than six feet long and 2,500 years old. Other Bronze Age objects include swords, axes and belt plates as well as crafted gold jewelry.

The Iron and Viking ages are represented by gold and silver jewelry showing highly developed skills and by iron swords and battle-axes.

Crop Abundance Could Be Shortage

Newark, N.J.—If the estimated 30 per cent population increase takes place it could turn the United States' crop abundance into a shortage by 1975, a scientist warns.

Dr. L. E. Cilforn of the American Can Company said that within a generation America's food needs will total 169 million tons compared to the 133 million tons consumed now.

"For every three plates at the table now, there will be four by 1975," he said. "It is the job of the food industry to fill that fourth plate as long as we can."
