

Holifield Says Porter Doing His Duty; Carlson Gives Non-Partisan Talk

Congressman from California Talks At Medford Lunch

A California Congressman told a group of fourth district Oregonians Friday that Congressman Charles O. Porter would "not be doing his duty in Congress . . . if he didn't express an interest in foreign affairs."

Chet Holifield, a Democratic Congressman from the Los Angeles area, addressed his remarks to a luncheon group at the Medford hotel. Holifield arrived in Medford Friday to start a speaking tour on behalf of Porter's campaign for reelection to Congress from the fourth district.

He said that foreign affairs are "tremendously important to the American people because 'two-thirds' of the budget ($45 billion out of $60 billion) is going for defense and foreign aid.

Holifield not only boosted Porter but also called for election of the Kennedy-Johnson ticket to the White House "so they can work as a team with the legislative branch."

Holifield was introduced at the luncheon by Porter, who called him "the dean of liberals in the House." Holifield has served in Congress for 18 years, and is chairman of the post office and civil service committees in Congress. In addition, he also serves on the joint committee on atomic energy.

The importance of the post office committee was one of the things that Holifield stressed in his talk, saying that Porter has been "criticized" for serving on this allegedly unimportant committee.

Helps Control Mail

Holifield refuted this and said: "I can tell you I wouldn't serve on that committee if I didn't think it was important." It is important, he said, because it helps control the mail in the U. S. and also sets the wages for 2 1/2 million post office employees.

Committee work isn't the only important work in Congress, Holifield said, and added that a Congressman "should be evaluated" by the interest he takes in his constituents. Porter does take an active interest in his constituents, he said, and added that he knows this from personal experience.

As for taking an interest in foreign affairs, Holifield said "the day of isolation of any country is past," and things that happen abroad both in the economic and military field "affect us here."

Commends Porter

Holifield said: "I commend and congratulate Congressman Porter for taking an outstanding position in Congress in denouncing dictators in South America."

Holifield hit on the Democratic theme that U. S. prestige has slipped around the world during the last eight years and said this is obvious when "no longer can the President visit where he wants to visit (Japan)."

He said the U. S. is losing its prestige abroad because "we have no longer lined ourselves up with the aspirations of the poor people of the world."

He blamed the Republican administration for the situa-

Score of Observers Trace Bright Meteor

By PHIL F. BROGAN
Pacific Northwest Director American Meteor Society

Bend - A spark-spraying, tailed fireball that blazed across Oregon from west to east at 8:06 p.m., PST, on Sept. 20 possibly dropped meteorites over Idaho's Sawtooth Range or nearby Big Baldy.

Information provided by scores of observers in three states indicate the fireball became visible over the Oregon coast at an estimated height of 80 miles, headed inland across the Cascades, exploded with a mountain-illuminating flare in the eastern part of the state and disappeared after crossing the Oregon-Idaho line northeast of Ontario.

Plane pilots, observers in control towers, forest lookouts, motorists, ranchers and residents of half a dozen Oregon cities saw the fireball and provided information that made it possible for the American Meteor Society to chart its course across Oregon.

Valuable Information

Most valuable information came from forest lookouts, who mapped the path of the big meteor by using their fire-finding equipment. The information they obtained was made available for the AMS on the suggestion of J. Herbert Stone, Portland, regional forester.

Lookout Sylvia Andres on lonely Spring Butte, overlooking the High Desert east of Newberry Crater on the Deschutes National forest, had a grandstand seat for the rare celestial show. Passing nearly overhead, the tailed fireball blazed across the east-facing window of her lookout station, exploded and illuminated old volcanic cones in the early darkness of the night.

Six pilots flying with the 141st Group, 116th Fighter-Interceptor unit, obtained a particularly fine view of the fireball as their planes flew in formation at a height of 20,000 feet over the Moses lake area, Washington.

Flying Easterly

The pilots were flying easterly, in the same general direction as the fireball and saw pieces break away, leaving trails like tracer bullets. Men on duty at the Portland Airport control tower charted the course of the fireball as viewed from western Oregon.

Mrs. Joseph C. Anderson of Roseburg saw the object from her home and said it appeared to drop straight down, in the eastern sky.

Albert Kissinger, Medford, watched the fireball flare toward northeastern hills, but did not see the explosion. Lloyd Morris, Canyon City, said the meteor shot across the John Day skies at a terrific speed, passing overhead a little to the south.

Lakeview Report

In Lakeview, V. E. Taylor viewed the object to the north and, with his northeastern view obstructed, surmised it dropped in the Deschutes country. Jane Wilson, Tumalo, saw the meteor out of her eastern window and provided a compass reading.

lands. Stock and fencing were damaged during previous hunting seasons, they claim.

Disarmament Is Emphasized by Kansas Senator

Ashland-Kansas Sen. Frank Carlson emphasized the importance of world disarmament in speaking to a luncheon gathering of about 50 people Friday in Ashland.

Due to a mixup in scheduling, Senator Carlson addressed a combined group of Jackson county Republicans and Ashland women Soroptimists in the Mark Anthony hotel. His talk was on a non-partisan basis.

Carlson said his experiences on the Senate foreign relations committee indicate that some world leaders are anxious to reach a disarmament agreement. "Harold Mcmillan of Britain told the committee that disarmament would be difficult. However, he indicated that he was willing to give it a try," Carlson said.

"We should be using the great brains in this country for purposes other than devising means of destruction," Senator Carlson commented. "They are needed for great humanitarian projects," he said.

Carlson referred to a recent book written by H. G. Wells titled "The Croquet

Ginger Rogers Joins in Battle Of Billboards

Portland - Ginger Rogers came out swinging today in Oregon's battle of the billboards.

The Hollywood actress is co-chairman of southern Oregon's Highway Protection committee, which supports passage of billboard control measure 15 on the Nov. 8 ballot. She is also a ranch-owner in Jackson county.

Having been invited by the Oregon Roadside Council to attend its annual meeting on Nov. 1, in Portland, the star wrote Council president David B. Charlton "We must keep our wonderful state beautiful, and nothing gives a worse impression of a people than the cheap, senseless clutter of their costly highways."

Peril To Driving

Miss Rogers continued, "Advertising companies should not be permitted to cash in on the cluttering of the people's highways, creating a peril to driving and shutting out the beautiful scenery, when they've not contributed a dime to the building of the highways, with even their offices and headquarters outside the state, and the money collected going outside the state."

"These companies collect millions for advertising and give property owners along the highways a measly little rental. . . Usually, even the advertising pasted on their boards is processed outside the state and shipped in. Oregon cannot afford this!"

Miss Rogers indicated that a previous TV commitment in New York on Nov. 9 made it impossible for her to be in Portland, but concluded "I'd like to be there and lend what weight I possess to the cause."

Hunter Restrictions Reported Successful

A petition to bar hunting on ranches between Rich and Applegate was "successful," area ranchers reported Saturday.

They said they expect to circulate another petition soon to protect their property against hunter damage during doe season.

Twenty-three farmers signed the request published to prohibit hunters using their
