Kennedy Favored By Betting Groups

By United Press International

Sen. John F. Kennedy was the professional betting choice today to win the presidency Nov. 8.

Bookmakers who set the wagering odds for major sports events sized up the presidential race as a victory for Kennedy in the latest quotations from California to New York and Miami to Philadelphia.

The odds, which are determined by the amounts of money bet by individuals or groups with the bookmakers, ranged from 9 to 5 in Las Vegas, the gambling capital of the nation, to 2 to 1 in Dallas and 7 to 5 in Richmond.

Bookmakers in Boston, Kennedy's hometown, were offering 6 to 5 odds with the bettor taking his choice between the two candidates.

Oregon University Professor Missing

Eugene – (UPI) – E. F. Beal, associate professor of business administration at the University of Oregon, was the object of a widespread search in the Cascade Mountains 11 miles east of Oakridge today.

The Lane county sheriff's office here said Beal failed to return from a hiking trip in wilderness country between Blair Lake and Mule Mountain Sunday.

Forest Service rangers came across his car Sunday on a road in the rugged area.

A search was begun using county police, state police, rangers and a bloodhound.

Beal started the hiking trip with a small dog.

Donald Nixon Denies Brother Aided Company

Los Angeles – (UPI) – Donald Nixon denied Sunday night that his brother, Vice President Richard M. Nixon, had ever had any financial interest in his company, Nixon's Inc., or that he had ever asked his brother for governmental favors.

Donald Nixon accused columnist Drew Pearson of trying to smear the GOP candidate by attempting to link him with a $205,000 loan Donald received.

Stock Purchase Denied

"I am deeply grieved and concerned to think that any individual would use my business misfortune to influence the outcome of the presidential election," he said.

Nixon, replying to charges Pearson made Wednesday, denied that the Republican presidential candidate ever purchased any stock or had "any financial interest in my company directly or indirectly."

Nixon said he received the $205,000 loan in 1956 through his long-time friend, attorney Frank J. Waters, who acted for financier Howard Hughes. He denied ever having met Hughes or ever attempting to get special government favors for Hughes.

"I have never asked my brother to do anything for me or anyone else in the government," Nixon said. "And if I did ask I know he would refuse."

Better Treatment Alleged

Pearson had charged in his Washington Merry-Go-Round column that matters involving Hughes' companies pending before the federal government received better treatment after the loan. At least one agency has publicly denied the accusation.

Pearson said in answer to Nixon's statement that "according to the records of the Los Angeles Corporations commission Richard M. Nixon was an applicant for stocks purchased in his brother's company."

Grange News

Roxy Ann Grange

On Oct. 22 the Roxy Ann Grange degree team conferred the third and fourth degrees on 41 members at the Fruitdale Grange in Grants Pass.

Three of the new members were from Liveoak Grange in Rogue River. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Carson were from Roxy Ann Grange, and the remainder from various Granges throughout Josephine county. The largest number was 16 from Sun Valley Grange. Forty-one members from Roxy Ann Grange met at a Grants Pass restaurant for dinner before the meeting.

The last Home Economics club meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Ray Offord Sr., on Roberts rd., with Mrs. J. O. Myhre and Mrs. Ivra Ellis, co-hostesses. There were 24 members and one guest present. At that time plans were made for the rummage sale that was held Oct. 27.

On Nov. 2, at 8 p.m. the Grange will have an open house and the officers will present the opening drill. A program is planned and refreshments will be served. All friends and neighbors of the Grange are invited to attend.

A potluck dinner at 6:30 p.m. will precede the meeting Nov. 4, at which time officers will be elected for 1961.

Nixon Planning Powerful Punch In Final Week

Washington – (UPI) – Vice President Richard M. Nixon plans a powerful one-two punch at the Democrats during this final week of the presidential campaign. The other half of his fighting team is President Eisenhower.

Final plans may be worked out today between Eisenhower and the vice president, who swings back out on the campaign trail tonight with appearances in Ridgewood and Newark, N. J., and Philadelphia. Nixon also planned to work here during the earlier part of the day on television speeches which will be shown to the voters nationally later in the week.

Going to Alaska

The Republican candidate announced today he would make a 2,400-mile jet flight from Los Angeles to Anchorage, Alaska, next Sunday to carry out a pledge to campaign in all 50 states. His office said he would be the first presidential candidate of this century to visit all states.

From Anchorage, Nixon will fly 3,100 miles overnight to Detroit to appear at a final rally there next Monday. Then he will return to Washington for a nationally televised election eve appeal with Henry Cabot Lodge, his running mate. He will spend election day in Washington.

His final nine-day campaign swing starting today will take Nixon 18,000 miles and bring his total traveling since he won the GOP nomination to 50,000 miles.

Television Scheduled

Eisenhower and Nixon will make their biggest splash together in New York Wednesday. They will appear that night on nationwide television with Lodge. Preceding the program they will drive down Broadway together in a festive ticker-tape welcome.

There are other aspects of the New York visit. The President has agreed to stump the suburbs with Nixon by helicopter Wednesday. They will travel with Lodge and Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller to Westchester and Nassau counties by helicopter, landing after their chopper-stop tour at the Battery to begin the motorcade up Broadway.

Finch-Tregoff Fate Undecided

Los Angeles – (UPI) – The Finch-Tregoff murder retrial moved into its 19th week with little hope jurors would return a verdict today on the fate of the suave surgeon and his young paramour.

Most of today's session was expected to be taken up with concluding the reading to jurors the 600 pages of testimony given by Carole Tregoff during the long retrial.

Reading of the testimony began Friday at the request of the jurors and took up all of Saturday's half-day session. There was no session Sunday with 180 pages still to be read.

The jury began its deliberations Oct. 19 after 17 weeks of trial.

Although official confirmation could not be found, speculation continued that the jury already had decided on the guilt or innocence of Dr. R. Bernard Finch, 43. He and Carole, 23, are accused of murdering his wife, Barbara, 33, July 18, 1959, for motives of love and money.

OF SMITH & MEN

By Jack Smith
(c) 1960 — Times-Mirror Syndicate

To be well-rounded in this age a man must know something about electronics. The subject may come up at intimate dinner parties.

Until the other day I didn't even know what electricity really is, although I use a kilowatt-hour of it every morning shaving.

I have the world's slowest electric razor. It wouldn't shave a peach. But I'm afraid to go back to cold steel. I've lost the touch.

My highest achievement in the field of electricity has always seemed to be the time I learned how to wire a doorbell in my grammar school vocational guidance class.

• • •

Even that triumph proved of little satisfaction. The teacher said my buzz was erratic. He said I wasn't suited to any vocation he knew of and suggested I try something else.

Also, the kind of doorbells I know how to wire are obsolete now. Doorbells don't buzz any more. They play a bar from Brahms on brass gongs. Or is it Bach? It's one of the Bs, I'm sure.

But the other day – 6,000 ft. up in the Sierra Nevada – I felt that at last I was close to discovering the eternal secret of this wondrous force.

The Southern California Edison Co. had invited some of us up to see how they make electricity at their Big Creek layout. This is one of the hydroelectric wonders of the world – a network of 11 dams, five man-made lakes, miles of tunnels through solid granite and eight powerplants generating 690,000 kilowatts.

• • •

The Edison people make electricity by trapping the waters of the San Joaquin River and running it down the mountain through their turbogenerators.

It falls 6,000 ft., working over and over again, never growing tired until it reaches the flatlands. They call it the hardwest working water in the world. The powerhouses take 690,000 kilowatts from it. Yet they take nothing at all from it.

A kilowatt, by the way, is 1,000 watts. The watt is a volt-ampere. It was named after James Watt, a Scotsman. I don't know who Volt-Ampere was, but it doesn't sound Scotch.

A kilowatt-hour is a kilowatt running for an hour. So 690,000 kilowatts means 3,456 billion kilowatt-hours. That would shave the Red Chinese army once a day for 1,000 years, even with my razor. The Russian army, of course, has tougher beards.

It was while I was shaving the first morning at Big Creek that I thought I might be making a breakthrough. My razor seemed to attack fiercely. It was louder, sharper than I had ever remembered.

I wondered if it could have anything to do with being so close to such a tremendous source of power.

• • •

That evening beside the fireplace in the guest lodge I decided to ask Jack Horton, the president of Edison.

"Mr. Horton," I asked, "do you really know what electricity is?"

He drew on his cigar and gazed into the fireplace.

"Nobody really knows," he said. "One of our men says it's snow. He can look at the snow and tell us how many kilowatts are in it."

I told him about the razor.

"You think there's anything in it?" I asked.

He smiled. "I doubt it," he said.

But I learned later he's only a lawyer, and doesn't really understand electricity. He just knows how to run a company.

I may have stumbled onto something at that.
