How To Make Salt Flow Tests Man's Ingenuity

By DICK WEST
United Press International
Washington - (AP) - Few things in recorded history are more stirring than man's increasing quest for a better salt shaker. In some ways, I think, it is even more thrilling than the quest for a better mousetrap. Certainly it is more dramatic than the quest for a better pepper shaker.

The struggle to make salt flow freely has challenged our Yankee ingenuity for more than a century, particularly on rainy days. It has been marked by triumphs and failures, heartbreaks and heartburn.

I learned all of this, and more, from Dr. Arthur G. Peterson, a local citizen who makes a hobby of collecting salt shakers. He is so wrapped up in his hobby he has written a book about it.

As little as we might think about it, and I personally think about it very little, Abraham Lincoln may never have seen a salt shaker. Dr. Peterson tells us that salt dispensers with perforated tops were practically unknown before 1865.

The trouble was that salt absorbed too much moisture for use in shakers. Lincoln probably had to make do with a salt dish, but I doubt that he worried much about it. He had a lot of other things on his mind.

Improved methods of refining salt changed the method of dispensing it. The early dispensers were variously known as sprinklers, dusters, boxes and dregs. The term "shaker" did not come into use until the 1890s.

Some folks persisted for a while calling a shaker a "celar," but they were generally looked upon as being old stick-in-the-muds.

Despite additives, coatings and other improvements, salt still had a nasty habit of clogging the shakers in a damp weather. People had to unscrew the cap and sprinkle the stuff around with their fingers. By that time, the eggs were cold.

Christian Women To Hear Greens

Mr. and Mrs. William Green, formerly of Medford and now of Eugene, will be guest speakers for a meeting of Christian Women's club to be held Friday, November 4, at 12:30 p.m. at Rogue Valley Country club.

The Greens have been active in Navigators and the Young Life groups in Eugene. "Ideas of Holiday Baking" will also be on the program. Each woman attending is asked to take her favorite recipe. Recipe books will be printed from these, and distributed at the December meeting.

Halloween Party Given in Prospect

Prospect Prospect Assembly of God church held a Halloween party October 29 for young people of the community. A scavenger hunt, "spook room" and games provided entertainment. The new pastor of Prospect Assembly of God church is the Rev. Lawrence Ray, Lovelock, Nev. The minister and his wife have four sons who are attending the Prospect school.

Friendly Neighbors Announce Meeting
Evans Creek - Friendly Neighbors club of The Meadows will meet November 8 at the home of Mrs. Curtis McReay on the Antelope road. A potluck luncheon is set for 12 noon and a sale of fancy work will be held in the afternoon.

Couple Honored At Two Parties; Home Destroyed

Eagle Point - Mr. and William Bigham have been honored at two recent showers. The Bighams' historic home was recently completely destroyed by fire and they are now living in a smaller home located on their ranch.

The Bighams were honored at a linen shower given at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Donald Anderson, Eagle Point, October 27. Members of Jackson County Cow Belles were hostesses.

Attending were the Mesdames Wallace Ragsdale, Robert Fisher, Dan Meeker, Eddie Meeker, Nora Bradshaw, Merton Bradshaw, George Nichols, Don Nichols, Lance Offenbacher, Leon Offenbacher, Winifred Horner, Dora Krauss, Don Bradshaw, Roland Smith, Robert Field, Claus Charley, John Bohner and Mrs. James F. Rice of Ewa, Hawaii. The Cow Belles members are from various parts of the county.

Following a social hour in the Eagle Point Grange hall Thursday evening, a community shower was given for Mr. and Mrs. Bigham. The Antelope Social club sponsored the event.

Terry Gail of the Gold Hill Livestock club, Mrs. John Bohner of the Jackson County Extension office, Clifford Moore of the Reese Creek Renegades, The Jackson County Cattlemen's association and the Antelope club all presented gifts to the Bighams from their organization.

About 70 friends of the Bighams attended the event.

Twice-a-Day Marketing Said Necessity in Paris

By ROSE MCKEE
Paris - "I hardly ever go out of the house without a market basket on my arm unless it is to lunch at some place like the Ritz."

Mrs. Art Buchwald, wife of the syndicated newspaper columnist whose humor is rampant on both sides of the Atlantic, added that there are eight market baskets in her home "and they are in constant use."

She was interviewed on what is like to keep house in Paris by a visitor from the National Association of Home Builders in Washington, D.C. The Buchwalds, who have three small children figure at times in their father's column, have a big, elegant apartment in a 130-year-old mansion near the center of Paris.

The huge living room has red damask walls, a 16-foot high, carved ceiling, a crystal chandelier, floor-to-ceiling windows and a wide, arched door to the library. Its furnishings include oriental rugs and a grand piano. Flowers add to its cheerfulness.

Mrs. Buchwald, a former Warren, Pa., girl, disclaimed credit for the effect of the furnishings. "No matter what you put in them, these rooms would be beautiful," she said. But, she continued, "in an old house, dust seems to come up through the floors and out the walls regardless of how much you work at it."

When the house was wired for electricity, no one visualized the number of appliances that one day would be used in it. Mrs. Buchwald has come to expect a fuse blow-out "every time we have a dinner party."

She had looked for a year before she found the apartment and was about to take another. It had one bath and a garden. When she found the present quarters, she called her husband, "What do we need most, one bath and a garden or two baths and no garden?" He settled immediately for two bathrooms.

Mrs. Buchwald, a gay, delightful woman, met her husband in Paris. She was working in the fashion field. Now, her career is focused entirely on him, their children, Joel, 6, Connie, 3, Jennifer, 4, and their home.

One of the difficulties of keeping a house in Paris for many American women, she indicated, is adjusting to a maid. The tendency, she explained, is to try to make it easier for the maid by getting her to do the marketing only twice a week instead of twice a day.

But, she said, maids are used to going to the shops for groceries morning and afternoon and "they like it—it gives them a chance to get some air and do a little window shopping, too."

Shop Every Day
It takes both Mrs. Buchwald and the maid to keep their household in food, which is bought at various different shops. "You don't keep things here," Mrs. Buchwald explained. "When there are tomatoes in the store, they are ready to be eaten that day. You buy them that day and you eat them that day."

Women's News • Social Events

'Y' Party Gala Event

About 135 people attended the family Halloween party at the YMCA Friday night. The variety of spooks, witches, flappers, convicts and nursery rhyme characters made judging of costumes a difficult job, it is reported.

The judges, Mr. and Mrs. Laurel Case and Mrs. M. W. Olson, in some contests asked the crowd to show their preference by applause.

The Earl Smith family in calypso singer dress received the prize for having the largest number in one family in costume. Norma McLean was the youngest person in costume and Myron Gaston's mask was judged most original.

Other prizes were awarded Carl Rasmussen, dressed as a girl, Dr. John Brandenberg as Yogi Beyer, Tracy Pierce as Raggedy Ann, Mrs. Kenneth Poore in Gay Nineties attire, Royce Holmes as a girl, Junita Rasmussen as an upside down clown and John and Susan Hettings as spooks.

The Emmett Bullard family won an advertisement identification contest. Prizes were donated by the Whitelaw Candy company.

Collarless Look Coming For Spring

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
New York - (AP) - Stock up on scarves and bulky neckties when you start your spring clothes shopping.

For New York fashion designers are doing a disappearing act with the collar. Dresses, suits and coats come with collars totally absent or nothing more than a ring of fabric or a narrow cuff standing away from the throat.

Coats in the spring collections designers showed buyers last week ranged in silhouette from the fitted princess to boxy, bulky numbers cut on the straight of the goods, with swirling flares which she once called the pyramid shape.

Also important are wide back narrowings to the hemline; coats which double as dresses, and coats with side instead of front and center closing.

Many of the boxy coats have low slung half - belts across the back. Designer Diana Adler was influenced by the Far East in her coat and suit designs for Carmel. She featured mandarin collars and kimono sleeves on both. Many came with silk scarves tied at one side of the neck.

At Leon Frechfel, a firm known for its fine tailoring, coats often came with princess shaping at the front, fullness at the back. Many sleeves were cropped at the elbow.

David Kidd, head designer at Arthur Jablow, revived the "parachute" coat with a lot of yardage flowing out from the collarless necklines. It looks as if fall and winter's culottes will go right into spring. The manufacturer Marquise endorsed the divided skirt-suit in his new collection designed by Belgian-born Philippe Tournaye.

Called "stride-skirts," these were pleated all the way around or were smooth with deep inverted pleats fore and aft. In both cases, until the models moved, the skirts looked conventional.

Colors whether for the bulky tweeds, the porous featherweight wools, silks or cottons ranged through bright greens, blues and pinks for coats. Look also for the so-called "string" shades for spring-off-white, ivory and palest beige.

William Inmans Entertainer Guests
Illinois Valley - Recent visitors in the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Inman were Mrs. Inman's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Roberts, Klamath Falls, and the Roberts' daughter, Mrs. Daniel Chapman and her infant daughter, El Paso Heights, Calif.

Girls League Sponsors Mother-Daughter Tea

Medford High school girls and their mothers have been invited to attend a mother-daughter tea at the high school Thursday, November 3, at 7:30 p.m.

Miss DeAnne Taylor, 1960 summer-exchange student from Medford, is scheduled to tell about her travels to West Berlin, Germany, during the summer months. She will also show colored slides.

Pictures Shown For Iris Society

Colored slides of iris from the collections of Paul Maxlin, Redding, Calif., and Mrs. Marjorie Lane, Portland, were shown at a meeting of Southern Oregon Iris society held recently at the home of Mrs. Kenneth C. Farley, 3563 Jacksonville highway.

The slides included pictures taken in the gardens of iris hybridizers at a convention time in Portland last spring, and also a group of native iris from the gardens of Mrs. Thomas Billings, Medford.

Mrs. Clarence Mathes, Ashland; Miss Patricia Stearns, Central Point; Mrs. Alfred Nelson and Mrs. Bert Stansbury, Medford, were guests. Members from various towns in southern Oregon were present.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. W. D. Jackson, 606 Iowa street, Ashland, November 22.

Many Attend Demonstration

Yreka - The Yreka and Shasta Valley Grange clubs met jointly in the W-N-Ma hall at the Siskiyou County Fairgrounds October 29. There were 200 members and friends present.

Marvin Black, Salem, Ore., assisted by Mrs. Black, demonstrated the art of making holiday arrangements, using unusual articles for backgrounds. Mr. Black, a friendly and informal instructor, broke many of the rules used by other arrangers, but the results were startling and extremely interesting.

Iona council of Pocatontas, Yreka, served luncheon.

Prospect Needs Girl Scout Head

Prospect - An appeal has been made in Prospect for a troop leader for Girl Scouts. It is stated that many girls are interested in scouting, but that no leader is available. A number of women have offered to serve as assistant leader.

Some person interested in arts and crafts is also needed to take a group of girls wishing to work towards another badge.

Anyone interested in helping the girls may obtain information from Mrs. Marcus Smith, Union 9-2192.

Couple Leaves

Applegate Valley - Mr. and Mrs. Vernon O'Brien returned Sunday to their home in Paradise, Calif., after spending ten days here visiting Mr. O'Brien's cousin, Jack O'Brien. They plan to spend the winter in Arizona.

Yreka Troops Hold Parties In Scout Room

Yreka - Halloween parties were given recently for Yreka Brownie Scout troops.

Mrs. Robert Billington, leader, and her two assistants, Mrs. David Miller and Mrs. William Anderson, gave a Halloween party for Brownie Troop 194 at the Yreka Community center. The table in the Scout room was decorated with the usual Halloween black cats, witches and pumpkins and all Brownies were dressed in costumes, making a festive event. There were games and bobbing for apples and guessing of riddles. Refreshments were served by the leaders.

Troop 209
Brownie Troop 209 enjoyed a Halloween party held in the Scout room at the Yreka Community Center building October 26. The Halloween decorations were made at a previous meeting by the girls.

The Brownies played games and later in the evening all lights were turned out and with just the light from a big jack-o-lantern burning, the scout leader, Mrs. Herbert Jackson told ghost stories. The costumes worn by the girls added to the weirdness of the setting.

Mrs. Jackson was aided by her assistant leader, Mrs. Don Maden.

Those attending the party were Terry Bessent, Janet Biegler, Wendy Jackson, Nancy Jenott, Diana Madden, Margo Spence, Pamela Murphy, Leanne Orr, Rebecca Phillips, Susan Robinson, Kathryn Heath, Aleta Taylor, Morna Dooley and Linda Flock. It was Linda's birthday, so her mother brought along a big birthday cake for all to enjoy.

Girl Scouts

Girl Scout Troop 113, under the guidance of Mrs. Esther McNill, leader, and Mrs. William Woodbury, assistant, now has a membership of 21 girls. Some of the girls are working on a pillow top and others are finishing a scrapbook.

Mrs. McNill recently attended a neighborhood clinic for leaders in Selma.
