Eugene — Frederick H. Boland of Ireland, 1960-61 president of the United Nations General Assembly, will speak at the opening Plenary Session of the Model United Nations conference to be held on the University of Oregon campus April 12 to 15.

Boland will give the conference's keynote address before MUN delegates and the general public in McArthur court, April 12 at 8 p.m.

Boland was first contacted by MUN about a month ago, according to Paul Ward, secretary-general of MUN. Finals for his appearance were made by Oregon Sen. Wayne L. Morse, U.S. Congressional delegate to the UN, and James J. Wadsworth, U.S. Ambassador on their country's policies and action in the UN.

The session will include international Court of Justice sessions, meetings of the General Assembly, and gatherings of various committees patterned after similar UN groups.

The MUN is completely student organized and run. It will involve several hundred university students during the preparation stage and later in the smooth operation.

President Nixon. Furthermore, the American Society of Newspaper Editors poll gives Nixon 314 electoral votes in 28 states, and Kennedy 209 electoral votes in 19 states.

Will Need Republicans
While I believe Nixon will be the next president of the United States and Henry Cabot Lodge will be the next vice president, I have earnestly urged that Republican energies be directed also to the congressional and gubernatorial contests. As president, Dick Nixon will need many Republicans in Congress to enact his progressive programs. He will need Republican governors to cooperate in federal-state programs which will keep tax money at home under local supervision for local benefits. As president, Nixon will need Republican legislatures to assure the fullest state participation to make the Nixon programs effective.

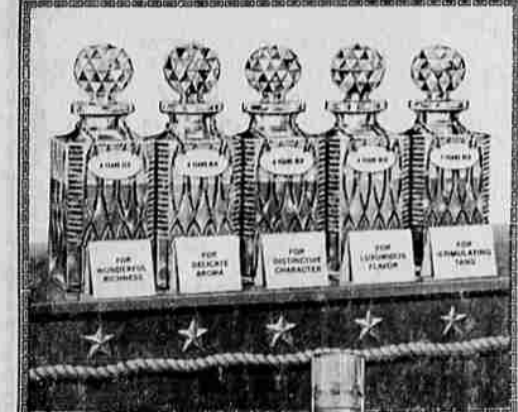

I am not forecasting the outcome of state and local elections, but I believe the trend toward Nixon and Lodge will have a beneficial effect for Republican candidates at state and local levels.

Election Views by Party Chairmen

Editor's note: What is the mood in the rival political camps as the hour of decision approaches in the 1960 presidential election? How does each side view the outcome and the campaign that is drawing to a close? The answers may be found in the following parallel dispatches written exclusively for United Press International by the Republican and Democratic National chairmen.

Democrats Predict Ticket Has Chance In All 50 States

By SEN. HENRY M. JACKSON of Washington
Chairman, Democratic National Committee
Written for UPI

Washington — UPI — Tomorrow we look forward to a great victory for Senator Kennedy and Senator Johnson.

At the outset of this campaign in July, we said we would not concede a single state to the Republicans. There is no reason to alter that opinion on election eve. To the contrary, the Democratic ticket has strengthened its position significantly in all 50 states since that date. We have a chance to carry all 50.

If our reports are correct, the decision may be close in a dozen or so states. Therefore, we are urging our Democratic workers across the nation to give maximum effort right up to the final bell. We may be warmly optimistic, but we do not intend to make the mistake the Dewey forces made in 1948.

It is worthwhile today to look back on the campaign and try to analyze what has happened.

There is no question the first television debate was a major turning point. Senator Kennedy proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that he was in command of the situation. He demonstrated keen knowledge and strong conviction, but more important, he showed the poise and coolness under fire that people expect in a president. The contrast between the two candidates was sharp and clear.

Nixon Hounded 'Uncle'
In subsequent debates, Senator Kennedy continued to expand and elaborate upon his program for a dynamic new America, while Mr. Nixon fought a defensive retreating action. When it came time for a fifth debate, Mr. Nixon hounded "uncle" and went to the White House for help. Those are the facts and history will record them as such.

But this has not been just a battle between two sharply divergent personalities. There are great issues at stake and the American people are restless and dissatisfied with the progress we are making. They doubt we are doing our best abroad. They are troubled by the fact the United States has lost the initiative in the world. They wonder why this nation, with its 180-year record of fighting for justice and freedom, has failed to keep the respect and support of the peoples of Europe and Africa and Asia. They are disturbed that America, with a 40-year head start in technology, allowed the Russians to be first in space, first to the moon, and first in rocket thrust. They are concerned that little Cuba has upset our relations with the rest of Latin America and poisoned the roots of a good neighbor policy that once looked so firmly implanted.

Morton Looks for Sizeable Majority Of Electoral Votes

By SEN. THRUSTON B. MORTON of Kentucky
Chairman, Republican National Committee
Written for UPI

Washington — UPI — I predict that the Republican Nixon-Lodge ticket will win a substantial majority of the electoral votes in tomorrow's election.

Republicans have never regarded this campaign as a shoo-in. We repeatedly have declared it to be one of the toughest election campaigns in recent political history. As this campaign progressed, American voters have had the opportunity to appraise the issues and the candidates. That is what they have done, and indications in the last two weeks are that the tide has turned in favor of the Republican candidates.

The issues have been brought into sharp focus. Americans realize peace has been preserved with honor. Our national dignity has invoked international prestige despite the doom-clamor of our opposition. Our economy is the strongest in history, and our people recognize that. What has been accomplished under the Eisenhower-Nixon administration constitutes a launching-pad for even greater achievements under a Nixon-Lodge administration.

As viewed today, our ticket will sweep the farm states, collect a substantial Southern vote, and, I believe, will carry a majority of the big seven states regarded as essential to victory.

More Than Majority Seen
I cited the tide running in Republican favor. It is apparent in California, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois and Texas. These states represent 140 electoral votes, and with others expected to settle into the Republican column, there is every likelihood that the Nixon-Lodge team will corral more than the majority of the nation's electoral votes. This view, however, is not minimizing the fact that in state after state the returns will be close.

This Republican viewpoint is stated on the heels of news magazine polls which indicate other results in Tuesday's election. But it must be remembered that those polls were at least two weeks old. They do not reflect the tide — or trend — which has taken place during the last two weeks. We at the Republican National Committee believe the recent trend has been toward Nixon and Lodge.

Our view is not without support among some of the nation's most skilled observers of what is happening in their own communities. Sixty-four per cent of the editors of small dailies and 62 per cent of the editors of weekly newspapers predict the election of Vice
