

Airline Hostess Believed Crash Victim Is Alive

New York—UPI—The funeral of an airline hostess killed in a highway accident near San Francisco was called off today when the corpse was tentatively identified as that of another girl.

The New York girl who was to have been buried here today was Mary Hawthorne, 26, one of four American Airlines stewardesses involved in a taxi accident in San Bruno Monday. Actually, Mary is still alive though in a coma, with her face swathed in bandages at Peninsula Hospital in San Mateo, Calif.

Mistake Discovered
The dead girl was Joan Frost, 26, Philadelphia, who has been sharing an apartment in New York with several other hostesses. The mistake in identity was discovered Wednesday night by American Airlines Engineer Robert Evans when he and a friend, Norma Pugh, visited the Walter B. Cooke Funeral Home.

Miss Hawthorne's mother, who had ordered the coffin kept closed, and an uncle and aunt had remained at the funeral home until Evans and Miss Pugh arrived then left for their homes. Evans told an attendant he would like to have the coffin opened for just a minute so he could slip a ring that had sentimental significance on Miss Hawthorne's finger.

"That's Not Mary"
"Oh, my God! That's not Mary," exclaimed Evans when the coffin was opened. Miss Pugh also said the corpse was someone other than her friend.

The airline made a check with California police and was told the cab was destroyed and the hostesses' belongings scattered. The dead woman was identified from papers found nearest her body on the highway at the time of the accident.

Two of the hostesses, Shella Murray, New York, and Teresa DiPincio, Philadelphia, are in good condition at Peninsula Hospital, leaving only Miss Frost as a possible alternate for the dead woman.

UN Troops Rescue Ambush Survivor

Leopoldville, The Congo —UPI—Reinforced United Nations troops rescued a second survivor of the 11-man Irish patrol ambushed by rebellious Congolese tribesmen in northeastern Katanga Province, a U.N. spokesman reported today. A fifth body also was recovered.

The spokesman at Elisabethville, capital of Katanga, said the second survivor was found during the night by search patrols. A "badly wounded" soldier was found Wednesday. The spokesman said the bodies of the five soldiers were taken to Albertville, headquarters for the 550-man Irish contingent to the U.N. forces in the Congo.

McDonald To Speak At School Program

Jim McDonald, director of the Jackson county curriculum center, will discuss "strengthening schools for the sixties with the use of visual aid teaching tools" at a program at Jackson school at 7:45 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 15.

The program is in connection with American Education Week. It will follow a classroom open house for parents at 7:15 p.m. Teachers will be in their rooms for conferences with parents that evening, school officials said.

The Jackson Teachers' chorus will provide entertainment during the program, and refreshments will be served.
