

Kennedy's First Big Task Seen To Give Economy Shot in Arm

By HENRY J. BECHTOLD
UPI Financial Editor

New York—To the victor belongs the spoils. But in this case a sagging economy is among the spoils and our new president's first big task will be to give it a shot in the arm.

The present administration has been trying for the past six months to bring the economy back to life—through easier money conditions and, more recently, increased spending—but business has not responded.

The two candidates continually argued about whether or not the nation was in a recession, and apparently Senator Kennedy was more convincing with his recession talk.

Now the business world will anxiously wait to see what measures he will take to back up his campaign promises.

Help May Be Too Late

There is no doubt he will take some anti-recession steps, but they will not help the economy over the near-term. Anti-recession moves take from three to nine months to become effective, and by that time, Tom Campbell, editor-in-chief of Iron Age magazine, says business will have started moving upward on its own.

Dr. Marcus Nadler, economist of the Hanover Bank, believes that the Democrats, not being able to claim a popular mandate, will be forced to go slow in taking any drastic measures.

One thing is sure, there will be an increase in spending. Kennedy has been emphatic on that point. This also would have been the case if Vice President Nixon had won.

A. W. Zelomek of the International Statistical Bureau says there is no doubt that the new Congress also will pay greater attention to the Full Employment Act of 1948. This is a mandate to Congress to do something about unemployment when it reaches about six or seven per cent. It presently is above five per cent.

SHE VOTED WRONG—Miss Georgiana Walker pays off her election bet as she catches a banana cream pie full in the face before an amused crowd in Hollywood, Calif. Wielding the gooey stuff is Miss Tyble Paul, who voted for John F. Kennedy.

OF SMITH & MEN

By Jack Smith

(c) 1960 - Times-Mirror Syndicate

For some time I've been seeking a substitute for the cocktail.

Doctors say that, while one mild aperitif may be recommended to relax the tense man before dinner, eight or 10 probably won't do him any good and may even be harmful.

At worst, his taste buds may be so embalmed he can't distinguish between thyme and rosemary. At best, he may be late to table.

Anyway, a man sometimes needs to prove to himself that he isn't a slave to such decadent customs as the daily 4-to-1 martini.

When I reach home after a day of friction and stress out in the abrasive world, I'm tired up like a Greco-Roman wrestler. My hands are knotted into small bloodless rocks resembling petrified otopi.

weights, one avoids the danger of rupturing some delicate tissue or dropping a cast iron disk on one's foot.

Fifteen minutes of this and I was unwound. I could feel the gentle swell of blood in my capillaries. I was ready for the tub. The water should be body temperature. Get in when the tub is empty and let the water gush over you, dancing and bubbling against the weary flesh.

I lay back in the tepid whirl. I squeezed my eyes shut and looked at the inside of my eyelids. Their fiery pictures soon went away. I pulled the plug. My tensions drained away with the water.

I dried with a rough towel. I put on flannel pajamas and lambskin slippers. I played a recording of languid Spanish guitar music. I sank in a deep chair and listened to the ripple and arabesque of vibrant strings. I was a golden leaf caught in an autumn zephyr.

My wife's voice rang through the mist like the clash of cymbals.

"Didn't you hear me?" she said. "You got a notice this morning from the life insurance company. You've lapsed again."

"Any more mail?" I mumbled. My zephyr had died down. I was only an old dry leaf, falling to the cold sidewalk to be swept up.

"Only a card from Dr. Pragmire," she said. "He wants you to bring your cavity in."

"What's for dinner?" I asked.

"I know you don't like it," she said, "but it was on special. It's liver."

I got up and mixed a double martini.

My stomach is taut as a trampoline. My neck will turn only in noisy, ratchet-like jerks. My optic muscles are stretched like slingshot bands, ready to let go and shoot the eyeballs out of my head.

These are the classic symptoms of the contemporary m.a.i.d.y., metropolitis, for which the 4-to-1 martini has heretofore been the most effective and popular specific.

I've had promising success, however, with my new regimen of mild exercise, hydraulic therapy and soothing phonograph music.

Yesterday was typical. I came home so tense I was one massive tic. I got into my sweatshirt and went to the garage for my workout. I use an old set of barbells a neighbor gave to the boys. It is splendid for relaxation.

Oregon Supreme Court Decisions

Salem—(UPI)—Federated cooperatives are exempt from Oregon's corporation excise tax, the Oregon supreme court ruled Thursday.

Pacific Supply Cooperative won its Multnomah county case against the state tax commission and the high court upheld Circuit Judge Alfred T. Sulmonetti's decree reversing the commission order denying the exemption.

The cooperative sued for a refund of taxes paid from 1954 through 1957.

Pacific Supply was qualified under the federal internal revenue code as an exempt cooperative and exemption from the state tax was taken for granted until two years ago when the tax commission proposed an assessment for back taxes.

In another case the supreme court ordered prison reformer Florence Reed Cook of Eugene to pay attorney fees for the persons she sued in connection with a bond election for a park recreational district in Lane county.

The decision reversed Lane county Judge William S. Fort, who ruled in favor of Mrs. Cook's opponents but failed to make her pay their attorney fees.

The court affirmed a $61,186 judgment for a log skidder during an unloading operation in Douglas county. Leroy Wilson sued John Hanley and Stanley Post, his employers.

Copenhagen, Inc., appellant vs. Lawrence G. Kramer and Helen G. Kramer; appeal from Multnomah county; opinion by Justice Pro Tem Dal King; Judge Paul R. Harris affirmed; affirmation of a nonsuit entered against a subcontractor or following his suit against home owners for value of labor and supplies.

Ruth E. Skow vs. Darlene Shulps, appellant; appeal from Multnomah county; opinion by Justice Pro Tem Dal King; Judge Pro Tem Barnett J. Goldstein affirmed; judgment for $10,000 recovered by a passenger against a motorist affirmed.

Iva Wochnick vs. Clare True and Troy True, appellants; appeal from Clatsop county; opinion by Justice Pro Tem Ralph Holman; Judge J. S. Bohannon reversed; suit to rescind a contract for sale of a hotel in Seaside with decree rescinding the contract reversed.

Ervin McBride vs. Paul F. Fitzpatrick, et al, appellants; appeal from Clackamas county; opinion by Justice Keith O'Connell; Judge Ralph Holman affirmed as modified; suit to rescind a contract for a car dealership with decree favoring McBride affirmed except a finding that the defendant was guilty of fraudulent conduct is eliminated.

David A. Brink and Rose M. Brink, appellants vs. Multnomah county; appeal from Multnomah county; opinion by Justice Keith O'Connell; Judge Pro Tem Carl M. Brophy affirmed; judgment of $8,000 for the Brinks affirmed as damages resulting from relocation and widening of a county road along East Stark street. Starks had appealed claiming the award insufficient.

Merle C. Nettick and Suzanna Yettick vs. City of St. Helens, appellant; appeal from Columbia county; opinion by Justice Gordon Sloan; Judge Howard K. Zimmerman reversed and case remanded; an order sustaining a city demurrer involving a suit to clear property in St. Helens of an assessment lien for street improvement reversed, judge ordered to overrule demurrer.

Carnation Lumber Co., appellant vs. H. B. McKenney, et al; appeal from Washington county; opinion by Justice William Perry; Judge Glen Hieber affirmed; judgment for dismissal of the company's complaint in an action for malicious prosecution affirmed.

State of Oregon ex rel Grinnell Co. of Oregon vs. E. H. White Co., Inc., and General Casualty Co. of America; appeal from Multnomah county; opinion per curiam; Judge James W. Crawford affirmed; state affirmed in action to recover on a contractor's bond.

Estate of Frank Malo, Leo Lettore vs. James W. Davenport, et al, appellant; appeal from Multnomah county; opinion by Justice Harold Warner; Judge William L. Dickson reversed; decree directing payment to petitioner of money accruing to the estate under railroad retirement act reversed, petition dismissed.

Jack Lavitch vs. Marion Smith, appellant; appeal from Multnomah county; opinion by Justice George Rossman; Judge Paul Harris affirmed; judgment of $2,650 for Lavitch in personal injury action affirmed.

Nelda Marie Schuyler, appellant vs. Earl William Haggart; appeal from Multnomah county; opinion by Chief Justice William McAllister; Judge Virgil Langtry affirmed; decree changing custody of a 12-year-old child from the divorced mother to the father affirmed.

Jean Shroul, appellant vs. Clarence W. Shroul; appeal from Douglas county; opinion by Chief Justice William McAllister; Judge Robert G. Davis; decree awarding custody of two children to the defendant father affirmed.

Dale H. Eastburn vs. Doretha A. Eastburn, appellant; appeal from Lane county; opinion by Chief Justice William McAllister; Judge Alfred T. Goodwin affirmed; decree changing custody of a child from divorced mother to the father affirmed.

Ervin McBride vs. Paul F. ## Teaching Experiment Reviewed at Meeting

Ashland—Representing the state department of education, Allen Lee discussed tentative plans for various areas to participate in a possible eight-year statewide teaching experiment at a meeting of school administrators and college officials on the Southern Oregon college campus Nov. 8.

Lee said the experiment would be concerned with a general improvement and upgrading of all aspects of education with a major emphasis on teacher training, both pre-service and in-service.

Financial backing for the experiment would come from the Ford Foundation fund for advancement of education and the amount of money granted for the project would be determined by the needs of the participating schools to advance their individual research areas, he added.

College Reaction

Dr. Elmo N. Stevenson, SOC president, was asked to prepare a statement outlining college reaction to the plan, how much money would be needed for an initial survey and planning, and data as to the number of school systems interested in cooperating with the college in conducting the experiment.

Lee also asked that letters indicating the interest of the various districts be submitted to the state board of school administrators. The letters were also to outline a number of possible projects for each district which would result in bettering the overall education program.
