

Prayer Said Great Force in World

The greatest force in the world is scientific prayer, Herbert E. Rieker of Indianapolis said in a lecture here Friday evening at the First Church of Christ, Scientist.

True peace and freedom will be secured for mankind through spiritual and moral rather than through atomic and material progress, Rieker said.

A member of The Christian Science Board of Lectureship, the speaker's topic was "The Power of Prayer Revealed Through Christian Science."

Denying that scientific prayer is a process of begging God for material blessings, he emphasized that prayer as understood in Christian Science is communion with God and His great fundamental facts of being.

"To protect our civilization Christian Science teaches us to pray daily, whether we are natural scientists, educators, statesmen, businessmen, housewives, or students in school. Our present and eternal happiness depends upon our prayers," he concluded.

BOOK DISPLAY—In observance of National Children's Book week, Nov. 13 to 19, The Public Library of Medford and Jackson county currently has set up in the children's department a large display of books that are available in the county. Medford book dealers are co-sponsoring the "Book Fair," which is one of several exhibits and activities planned for the week, according to Librarian Omar Bacon.

Above, Loreta McClearn and Emily Carpenter, young library patrons, drop a suggestion in the "wishing well," while Assistant Children's Librarian Mrs. Shirley Reed works on the display. The wishing well was devised as a means of finding out what improvements in library facilities or service that children would like to see come about, Bacon said.

General Dean Finds Retirement Active

By JOHN STAFFORD
Mail Tribune Staff Writer

How does a man who has spent more than 30 years serving his country find retirement? Maj. Gen. William F. Dean finds it active and stimulating. He was in Medford Friday, serving as marshal of Veteran's day parade.

Dean is a veteran of two wars. He served in World War II and the Korean conflict. He achieved world fame for his courage and stamina while enduring a three-year imprisonment by the North Korea and Chinese Communists in the Korean War. He was captured in 1950 and released in 1953.

In 1954 Dean wrote a series of articles for a national magazine telling of his experiences as a prisoner of war. The articles described the ordeals he went through. Stands Tall and Erect.

What does William Dean look like today, 10 years after his capture? He is tall and erect. He has snow white hair which makes a striking contrast with his face, bronzed by California sun rays. His eyes aren't sparkling. They are gray, probably not so much from his 61 years, as from his horrible ordeal in Korea.

However, in talking with Dean, the impression is given that here is a man who really appreciates and knows how fortunate he is to be here.

Dean and his wife, Mildred, live in Berkeley, Calif. He retired from the Army five years ago. Since then, his schedule has been vigorous. "Almost as vigorous as when I was in the service," he says. "I spend a great deal of time traveling all over the U.S., speaking to good will and charity groups."

He also has a son who is in the Air Force in Texas. "Speakers for Air Force graduation ceremonies are scarce, so once in a while my son comes to California in a jet, picks me up and takes me to Texas to address the graduates," Dean related.

He is also in great demand by the Army for personal appearances at Army posts throughout the country. "I never get everything accomplished in a day that I want to," he says.

Somehow, one gets the impression that he is a man who wants to make up for three years lost time in helping humanity.

Army Reserve Center Dedicated Friday to Medford's War Hero

Santo hall, Medford's new Army reserve center, was dedicated Friday by Maj. Gen. William F. Dean (USA retired) "in honor of Medford's war hero."

The $300,000 structure is named after T/Sgt. Hubert A. Santo who died in 1945 of injuries received in WWII. His father, E. R. Santo, 616 South Ivy st., Medford, unveiled a plaque in his honor and assisted in the ribbon-cutting ceremonies.

Sergeant Santo's mother died some years ago. (The Mail Tribune incorrectly reported that she was still living. It regrets the error.) Besides the father several other members of the Santo family were present at the ceremonies.

200 Persons Attend
An estimated 200 persons attended the dedication in front of the new center at 701 North Columbus ave. The dedication came shortly after the conclusion of the Veterans day parade in downtown Medford.

Brig. Gen. William H. Prentice, Medford, preceded General Dean's address with a short talk on the history of the center and account of Sergeant Santo's feats during WWII. General Prentice pointed out that Sergeant Santo received a Silver Star for his gallantry in action in the Solomon islands, and was posthumously awarded a Bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for gallantry in action at San Manuel, Luzon, Philippine islands.

General Prentice said Sergeant Santo exposed himself to the enemy at San Manuel in order to draw fire away from members of his platoon on Jan. 24, 1945. The plan worked, but in so doing, Sergeant Santo was seriously wounded by enemy mortar fragments, he said.

Raised in Medford
Sergeant Santo died several days later on Feb. 5, while on board a hospital ship. He was 27. He had been raised in Medford and graduated from Medford High school in 1938.

In his address General Dean, himself a prisoner of the Communists for three years in the Korean war, said that "many unthinking Americans" no longer feel there is a need for soldiers. They think ballistic missiles are enough because the next war will be decided in seconds, he said.

But, "this is what the Communists would like us to think and they would like us to prepare accordingly," the general said.

"This enemy of ours only respects strength and if we are to retain peace in this world we must indicate and prove we are strong," he asserted. The presence of U. S. troops in Europe, he said, gives our Allies "hope and strength."

General Dean said "every war that the U. S. has fought has been won by the citizen soldier—ground, air and Navy—all important, all working together as a team."

A telegram from Secretary of the Army William M. Brucker, was read at the ceremonies. Brucker said on behalf of the department of the Army he joins in dedicating the center "to a gallant soldier and an outstanding citizen . . . from Medford, Oregon."

Army units assigned to Santo hall are the 2nd Battalion, 414th Regiment; 382nd Quartermaster Battalion; Receiving Company, 104th Division; and the 637th Infantry Division.
