

"Ghost Train", mystery-comedy which Footlighters are producing this week at their little theater at the Fairgrounds, is filled with tense moments such as this pictured here. Setting for the play is the train depot in a rural Maine community in which six people are stranded overnight. After the station master, played by Bob Onstad (center) has thoroughly frightened the group with hair-raising tales and the station master falls dead in the arms of "Chuck" Taylor, playing Richard Winthrop, and Dick Wager, playing Charles Murdock. Bob Onstad came to Medford from Portland where he was one time stage manager for a Portland little theater group. (Simonson photo)
