Problems of First Catholic President Reviewed by Cassels

By LOUIS CASSELS
Washington (AP) — When President-elect John F. Kennedy takes his oath of office next Jan. 20, he probably will rest his hand upon a Douay Bible used by the Catholics rather than the King James' Protestant version.
This innovation can hardly be said to strike at the roots of the U.S. constitutional system. Will there be other, more basic ways in which America's first Catholic president will differ from his 33 Protestant predecessors?
During the campaign, a number of Protestant clergymen voiced fears that a Catholic president would take orders from the Pope and would seek in various ways to give his church a preferred position in American society.
But many knowledgeable Protestants and Catholics expect precisely the opposite. They are convinced that Kennedy will go out of his way to display his independence of ecclesiastical control, and his devotion to church-state separation.
Even before Kennedy was nominated, the Catholic magazine Commonweal observed that there would be no "organizational advantages for the church" in having one of its members in the White House.
Play Down Advantage
"It might well be argued that 'Catholic interests' would actually be hurt by the election of a Catholic president," said Commonweal. "As president, a Catholic might feel impelled to lean so far backward to show his fairness that he would be less free than a non-Catholic."
More recently, an article in the Protestant journal Christian Century, asserted that Kennedy, being immune to any charge of anti-Catholicism, is "better equipped to deal with hierarchical pressures" than a Protestant president might be.
Those who hold this view note that it was an Episcopal president, Franklin D. Roosevelt, who sent a special envoy to the Vatican, and a Baptist, Harry S. Truman, who proposed sending an ambassador.
Kennedy has said that he opposes any U.S. diplomatic relations with the Vatican.
It is also noted that Vice President Richard M. Nixon, a Protestant, said during the campaign that he favored letting each state decide for itself whether to include par-

School Gym Roof Repaired Recently

Happy Camp—The five-year old gymnasium roof at the Happy Camp High school has been repaired by Hendricks and Co. of Klamath Falls, contractors for Johns Manville.
The contractors worked 3 1/2 days, reroofing and placing three layers of asbestos felt and tar on the roof which has been leaking, damaging the floor below for the past two winters.
The firm constructing the gymnasium five years ago has since gone out of business. A 20-year bond on the roof was given by Johns Manville at the time the building was constructed, thus the reroofing was done with no charge to the district.

Plywood Plant May Be Built in Yreka

Yreka — Harry Crebbin of the Yreka Chamber of Commerce said yesterday that the Willamette Plywood plant had investigated several sites in the Yreka area with plans to establish a plant as soon as the plywood market improves.
The plant would employ about 150 persons, and would represent a capital investment of about $1.5 million with a monthly production capacity of four million feet of three-eighths inch plywood.
The Willamette plant in Happy Camp is making veneer which is trucked to Hornbrook, and then taken by rail to the main plant at Aumsville, Ore. Company officials believe it will be more economical to lay up the green veneer into plywood in the Yreka area.
Construction of a plant possibly could begin as soon as the current poor market conditions improve.

Unsurpassed Opportunity in This Profitable Builders Supply Business
Including Buildings, Land, Inventory
Here is a chance of a lifetime for someone with experience in retail builders supplies.
This profitable business NETTED OVER $18,000 last year after paying the owner a salary. And that net was made on sales of approximately $100,000. It didn't take an army of men working to do that amount of business. Most of the sales are of high profit items taking little labor.
The inventory is good and clean. Not old out of date items, but fresh merchandise. The buildings are all in excellent condition.
The location is near perfect in a fast growing community with little or no competition. And the community is sure to grow even more with its location near the new highway interchange.
Reasonable terms can be worked out with the owner. His health forces him to sell this highly profitable business.
Opportunities like this do not come often. So if you are experienced in retail builders supplies and have some ready cash you can retire in ten years. Complete information given to qualified prospects.
