Small Worlds Around Us

By Lynn M. Watkins

Little Dog Had Unerring Instinct

The little dog has been alive on this earth but 10 short months, certainly not time enough to have acquired any appreciable accumulation of knowledge. But her instincts are active.

Early in her life, even before she had mastered the technique of digging, she was impelled by some ancient heredity to bury bones.

Nothing strange at all that she should bury bones or even playthings. Not too strange either that she should occasionally retrieve some of these things. This, many folks assured her owner, was partly memory, but mostly accident. Of all the bones she buried, these all-knowing folks said, only an accidental one or two, would ever be recovered.

Under Shrubs

It was only natural that the dog, who was fenced in a large backyard, only buried her treasures under the shrubs that bordered the entire area.

During the long summer days the little dog amused herself, when she wasn't sleeping, by chewing on a stick, a small tree branch or a rag.

She was particularly fond of chewing clothes pins. One pin falling from the clothes line was instanly grabbed and a short time later it would be only a pile of soggy, shredded bits.

Then one day by sheer accident she hit the jackpot. She had leaped up and grabbed a rug that was attached to the clothes line. It was pinned securely, but when she let loose the line snapped up and disloged the clothes pin bag. It fell to the ground, spilling the pins.

When the dog's owner returned from work he found the empty clothes pin bag but no pins. A careful search of the entire yard revealed no pins, every one had disappeared. While he searched, the dog sat and watched. There was but one conclusion to be reached, the dog had buried every clothes pin.

Showing Up

Since that time, the pins have been showing up at the rate of five or six a day. An examination of each pin reveals imbedded dirt, indicating they have been underground. It is also evident the dog carried the pins away, one by one, and probably buried every one in a different place. So far, 50 or 60 have been recovered.

In the small, bullet-shaped head of the little dog must be a pretty complex filing index: remembeing where several dozen objects are buried would seem to require considerable exercise of mental-remembering; and she has only been living about 10 months.

Hatfield Says Stand for Spiritual Faith More Important Than Defense

By YVONNE FRANKLIN
Mail Tribune Washington Bureau

Washington – (Special) – Gov. Mark Hatfield in a speech here last week declared that the "spiritual mobilization" of the nation is of greater importance than defense or economic mobilization.

Speaking to a gathering of 400 men and women interested in a non-sectarian youth organization called Young Life, the governor challenged his listeners with the responsibility of not only educating themselves in the Christian faith, but in taking a stand for it.

He quoted Woodrow Wilson: "The sum of the whole matter is this: that our civilization cannot survive materially unless it is redeemed spiritually. It can be saved only by becoming spiritually permeated with the Spirit of Christ, and being made free and happy by the practices which spring out of that Spirit. Only thus can discontent be driven out, and all the shadows lifted from the road ahead."

Hatfield said, "The great American ideal is certainly centered in and based upon a fundamental truth: that is to have political freedom, men have to be governed more than just by political institutions. If we are to enjoy our liberties, we can only enjoy them to the fullest when we find our faith, commit ourselves and give allegiance to an authority higher than ourselves-and that is God."

Young Life is a 20-year-old organization of dedicated laymen, who go where the young people are, gain their confidence and trust, speak language they understand, organize them into clubs, and bring them into a personal relationship with Christ. They work with all denominations, Protestant and Catholic. They avoid doctrinal or devisive dogma, and stress three basics: a right relationship to Christ, knowledge of the Bible, and a right relationship to the church of their choice.

It supports three ranches in Colorado which can take 400 teenagers a week during the summer, a beach club for 200 at Vancouver, British Columbia and a skiing lodge in New Hampshire. The cost is $40 a week plus transportation per person. There the teenagers are confronted with the Christian message and its application to their lives. Their clubs meet weekly in private homes, and there can be from 40 to 80 in a group. Oregon has many active groups.

Hatfield listed "the subtle cult of neutralism" as an obstacle to spiritual mobilization, which says one cannot take a position lest he be identified with a small group or oranization and thus lose "objectivity." He believes objectivity and neutralism are confused and says that all men to be effective must take a stand.

Theologian Quoted

He quoted a Quaker theologian, Elton Trueblood: "When we analyze the real progress of history, the great steps forward have not been accomplished by men who have stood off in splendid detachment, but by men and women who have been willing to commit themselves to a cause.

"If America remains strong," said Hatfield, it will be because men and women have the courage to stand on what they believe and be willing to give it expression.

He also listed our organization-oriented society as an obstacle to spiritual revitalization, saying "we have lost the concept and objectives for which the church was called into being." He stressed that compartmentalization of life – having a business life, a family life and a social life with no correlation–is an obstacle.

He further challenged his audience to educate themselves spiritually, to learn to pray, to take the responsibility of witnessing. "We abdicate responsibility to the clergy," he said, and listed many obligations of the laity as, "developing, expressing and sharing the message. We need contagious, concerned Christians."

"The spiritual mobilization of America will not be legislatively imposed by fiat or showmanship," he said. "It will only come as individuals are willing to give top priority to the strengthening of their spiritual sinews, starting with self and our relation to God, so that we will be truly mobilized to face the crisis ahead."

Own Life Changed

Douglas E. Coe, formerly of Salem and a co-worker with Gov. Hatfield in the Young Life movement when both were at Willamette university as student and professor, introduced Hatfield and said his own life was changed by the organization and Hatfield's influence. He was a math major, is now a director of International Christian Leadership which is a similar organization with adults as the target. Coe said of Hatfield:

"He does these things which other politicians won't do. He believes what he says, and he states clearly where he stands in regard to the Christian faith, whereas most men won't enunciate it clearly, if at all, because of fear of offending. Hatfield provides a positive leadership to which young people respond."

Hatfield is active in the Young Life movement in Oregon and serves on the board of the ICL, which organization is responsib'e for prayer breakfasts held by the President and members of the House and Senate in a Washington. They are inaugurating a series of Governors' breakfasts. They are internationally minded, working in Europe, in some countries primarily with the Catholic church. It is ecumenical in that it seeks to bridge the great chasms that separate organized Christianity.

Three Men Charged With Burglaries

San Francisco—(UPI)—Postal inspectors Monday filed charges against three men in connection with a recent burglary of a grocery store and postal sub-station at Four Corners, near Salem, Ore.

The suspects were Samuel Phillips, 38, a laborer; Harold G. Martin, 31, a bartender; and Clarence E. Greenlee, 20, a truck driver. All were itinerants who were arrested Friday in motels in San Pablo.

The burglary involved only $140 in cash but included 500 blank postal money orders each with a potential value of $100.

The inspectors held the trio on a technical charge pending filing of charges in Portland.

Ike To Have Turkey For Thanksgiving

Washington—(UPI)—The nation's turkey growers today presented a 40-pound broad breasted bronze tom turkey for President Eisenhower's Thanksgiving dinner.

Senate GOP leader Everett M. Dirksen, Ill., accepted the bird at the White House from officials of the National Turkey Federation and the Poultry and Egg National Board. Eisenhower is vacationing in Augusta, Ga.

This was the 15th consecutive year that the organizations gave a Thanksgiving turkey to the White House.
