Government Range Lands Big Issue With Stockmen; Woolley Gives BLM Policy

By JOE COWLEY
Mail Tribune Farm Editor
Much of the Oregon Cattlemen's association convention in Medford last week was devoted to government range management and accelerated range conservation and improvement programs. This is particularly important to Jackson county stockmen with an estimated 8,500 head of cattle grazing on government range in late spring and summer months.

BLM estimates are 5,000 cattle and 2,000 sheep on its range land within the county. Rogue National Forest officials estimate 3,500 cattle use their ranges. Both agencies estimate that about 4,000 sheep graze on government range lands or 2,000 on lands under the jurisdiction of each of the agencies.

Edward Woolley, director, bureau of land management, further pointed up the importance of this program during his talk here. "A license for livestock numbers permitted to use federal range has taken on financial value because these licenses and permits can be used as collateral for loans and are taken into account when ranch properties are bought or sold. Some operators strenuously resist reductions in licensed use even though those reductions may only be on paper," he pointed out.

Study Results Given
"Results of the range condition studies show that some 25 per cent of Oregon's federal range is improving. About 51 per cent is more or less in status quo, now under treatment, while about 25 per cent needs additional treatment," he noted.

Recreation Programs
Referring to use of public land for recreation, Woolley pointed out that illegal posting of federal land indicating closure has been improved greatly. Access roads are being constructed into areas that were previously inaccessible or are constructed to bypass private property. Exchange of use agreements are being developed with landowners that serves to make certain private land available for public use in lieu of isolated tracts of federal land. Improved working relationships are being developed between the landowner and the sportsmen, the BLM chief said.

Camp Fire Girls
Mrs. Katie Compher's group recently elected the following officers: President, Mary Lou Croy; vice president, Mary Jo Campbell; secretary, Diane Briggs; treasurer, Cathy Compher; and reporter, Glenda Furry. The other five members are Mindy Hackett, Mary Davis, Sharon Brown and Gale Blake.

Investment Funds
Many variables must be considered by the resource technician when making range surveys, Woolley explained. These are soil types, amount and season of rainfall and snowfall, temperature, winds, topography, availability of water, and many more such factors. "Such determinations require judgment and many range users have used the formal appeals procedure to protest decisions that have been made," the BLM director said.

Supreme Court Lectures South On Evils of 'Fencing' Negroes

Washington—(UPI)—Southern states today were digesting a sharp Supreme court lecture on the evils of "fencing" Negroes out of their voting rights.

The court unanimously ordered a federal trial in Montgomery, Ala., on Negro complaints that the state of Alabama redraw the city boundaries of Tuskegee in order to disenfranchise them.

In issuing the order, the area court stepped into an area it has studiously avoided in the past.

Out of Political Arena
Fourteen years ago, Justice Felix Frankfurter referred to the subject of voting reapportionment as a "political thicket" where the federal courts should not venture. Monday, he said the circumstances of the Tuskegee case lifted it "out of the so-called 'political' arena and into the conventional sphere of Constitutional litigation."

Girl Scouts

Ceremony Held
Rogue Valley Girl Scouts welcomed a new Brownie troop on November 3 when Brownie Troop 36 held an investiture ceremony. Ten girls received their Girl Scout pins.

According to Mrs. Donald Stratford, leader of the new troop, the Brownies have already entered into Scout activities, including a visit to the fire station on October 18 and participation in the Brownie Revel on October 29.

The Brownies have chosen Rogue Valley hospital as their community project and will visit the hospital on November 22 to deliver Thanksgiving favors they are making for the patients.

Receiving their Girl Scout pins as Brownies were Kathy Riecke, Marie Stratford, Merry Mast, Rebecca Olson, Karla Renee Legg, Rhonda Breedlove, Marla Czekli, Meri Czekli, Margaret Birch and Vickie Ann Austin.

Police Bag Bear

Cleveland, Tenn.—(UPI)—Police men Leon Beatty and George Ellis, armed with a shotgun and a 38 caliber revolver, shot and killed a 500-pound black bear which invaded the city Monday, raided garbage cans and smashed the plate glass window of a hardware store.

Children Die in Fire

Chicago—(UPI)—Three children died Monday night when they were trapped by fire in a one-room basement apartment. Firemen said the flames blocked the only door and the children were unable to escape because the windows were barred.

How Women Vote

St. Petersburg, Fla.—(UPI)—Gov. Leroy Collins said Monday the reason women voters are so interested in the wives of political candidates is because "there are few men who have higher standards than their wives."

Brighton, England

—(UPI)—Albert Hodgett has asked the Chesterfield Rural Council to move a bus stop because passengers on the top deck of the buses which halt there can look into his bedroom window.

Pharmacy Phacts

From GENE WESTLAND
We like to know that people are interested in the pharmaceutical profession. Just the other day we were asked "Is a chemical a drug?"

We're always glad to answer questions like this because we've found that many of our customers confuse the identification of a drug with its application. They are two very different things.

Actually, a chemical substance is a drug when (1) it uses have been medically-proved; (2) when your physician has been completely informed about its powers, and (3) when it is finally, easily available to you, the patient. Chemical compounds as such are not necessarily drugs.
