Danger From Sharks

In "Science" is an excellent article on attacks on swimmers by sharks, written by

P. W. Gilbert,

L. P. Schultz,

and S. Springer.

The Shark Research Panel is gathering information on all the attacks made by sharks on swimmers around the world. The recommended: "Always swim with a companion. 2) If sharks are known to be in the area, stay out of the water. 3) Since blood attracts and excites sharks, do not enter or remain in the water with a bleeding wound. Also, if you have swam a fish, get out of the water with it as quickly as possible.

Usually, a shark will circle its intended victim several times before striking, hence if a shark starts doing this to you, try to get out of the water as quickly as possible, but swim without making too much disturbance. No one knows yet why, so rarely, a shark will attack a man. The danger of such attacks is less than that of being hit by lightning. Skin divers often have reason to fear a big
