Most People Claimed To 'Think Circles' Around Speakers

By HENRY J. BECHTOLD
UPI Financial Editor

New York –(UPI)–Don't feel too bad if you have trouble holding an audience's attention during a speech. Most speakers are in the same boat.

Henry Bechtold

The reason: Most people "think circles" around speakers, and many get lost on tangents.

These are the findings of Prof. Ralph G. Nichols of the University of Minnesota who said most adults think at least four times as fast as they talk.

The average American, according to Nichols, speaks at a rate of 125 words per minute among his family and friends, 100 words per minute in front of an audience. But most of us think at a "cruising speed" of 400 to 500 words per minute.

The upshot of this, he declared, is that learning from listening operates at an average efficiency of only 25 per cent. Two days after a talk, you have forgotten three-fourths of what you heard.

Three Suggestions

Nichols has suggested three ways to improve retention of verbal communication, all based on the fact that the mind moves faster than the voice.

–Try to anticipate the speaker's next comment – if you guess right your thinking is reinforced; if you guess wrong, you will immediately compare your answer with the speaker's; either way you learn.

–Identify what is being used by the speaker to support his points–factual explanation, emotional exhortation, or illustration by example.

–Make mental summaries every three or four minutes during a lecture. This pays the greatest dividends in listening efficiency that possibly can be mastered.

'Drop-Off' Pattern Shown

Good listening is of utmost importance to business, but a study of 100 companies showed a pattern of "drop-off" in communication from the top down.

Vice presidents understand 67 per cent of what they hear from the board of directors and top management, according to the study.

At the general supervisor level, 56 per cent of the same information survives; by the time it reaches the plant manager the level is down to 40 per cent; among foremen it dips to 30 per cent, and finally, among individual workers the level of understanding sinks to 20 per cent.

Better Understanding Needed

This all means that one out of five messages from the top gets through to the men on the line, Nichols said.

He added that downward communication is only going to be raised significantly in its efficiency when top management better understand the attitudes, opinions, ideas and suggestions of the people at the bottom of the structure.

Brother and Sister Given Hearty Meal By Sympathizers

New York –(UPI)– The two neatly dressed children clutched hands tightly and stared wide-eyed at the rows of toys.

They wandered aimlessly around the aisles of Gimbels, looking at the dolls and trucks and cap pistols, until a security officer for the department store noticed them and asked about their parents.

The boy in the blue jacket spoke up proudly, "My name is Michael and I'm five and I'm taking care of my sister. She is Maria and she is four."

Michael said they were looking for Yogi Bear, a children's toy designed after a television cartoon hero. "Mommy said we could," Michael added.

Police Find Note

It was near closing time and an announcement on the public address system failed to produce anyone to claim the two brown-haired, dark-eyed children. They were taken to a police station where a policewoman found a neatly written note in Michael's jacket. Both he and his sister had religious medals in their pockets.

"These are my children, Michael and Maria," the note read. "They are Catholic. They have had their shots and vaccinations. I love them dearly, but I have no money, no food and no place to go. Please be kind to them. I hope they will be happy. I hope I can come and claim them some day soon. Things are black for me. Thank you for your help."

Collection Taken Up

Written on a sheet of stenographer's notebook paper, it was unsigned. Police said it obviously was written by a woman.

The officers took up a collection and Michael and Maria, who faced the prospect of a bleak Thanksgiving, were placed before a meal of turkey drumsticks, chocolate milk, sandwiches and cookies. Maria ate part of Michael's drumstick. Michael seemed to enjoy the cookies more than the turkey.

A short time later they were transferred to the children's shelter to spend the night. Maria began to cry when the policemen left. Michael put his arm around her and fought to keep back his own tears.
