Justice Wants To Intensify Law on Gambling Operators

Washington - (UPI) - The Justice Department wants to intensify its crackdown on operators of one-armed bandits and other coin-operated gambling devices.

An FBI spokesman said the Justice Department is seeking legislation to strengthen enforcement of the anti-slots act, passed in 1951, and to extend the reach of the law to include certain types of pinball machines. The move may be made in the January Congress.

The spokesman said most slot machine operations have been effectively limited since the launching of a federal crackdown nearly a decade ago. But he said further legislation was needed.

Since enactment of the Johnson-Preston anti-slots act, the FBI has seized 14,991 slot machines and won court convictions. Highpoint in the drive was 1952 when the FBI seized 13,906 machines across the nation.

An FBI spokesman said very few slot machines any longer have slot machines. Last year only 75 such devices were seized under the Johnson-Preston act, which is aimed at inter-state transportation of coin-operated gambling devices.

Actually, slot machines are not a major domestic problem. Most of them are found in Nevada, where gambling is big business and legal—and Maryland, where they are permitted as a matter of local county option.

But the foreign trade in slots is another matter. Henry Preston, a veteran in the Justice department's criminal division, said the machines are becoming increasingly popular in other countries, including Japan and Germany. Only last month, agents seized 420 slot machines consigned to London on grounds the shipper failed to register them for overseas delivery.

In an effort to block such overseas shipments, the Justice Department has had to attack the problem through registration laws. It would like more specific authority, such as a law making it illegal to ship slots in foreign commerce.

Various Ideas

The department also has various ideas as to how other sections of the law could be improved. For one thing, it would like to see Congress pass legislation that would make slot machine manufacturers maintain better business records. As it is, agents sometimes have trouble tracing the machines to their manufacturers.

Peterson said the problem continues to plague enforcement officials because "there's so much easy money involved."

"It doesn't strain the imagination to come to the conclusion that hoodlums follow the slots," he added.

Wherever slots exist, he said, usually is found a greater concentration of hoods and resultant greater opportunities for shakedown murders and gangfights.

Jet Engine Used As Gas Turbine

Possum Trot, Ky. - (Science Service) - The combination of aircraft power with an industrial need has resulted in harnessing a jet engine as a gas-powered turbine. The stationary power source is now pumping 600,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas a day here.

The advantage of the RT-248 gas turbine is that it provides tremendous power in a "small package."

A Pratt & Whitney Aircraft J-37 jet engine was adapted to run on natural gas in the RT-248 gas turbine, designed by The Cooper-Bessemer Corporation, Mount Vernon, Ohio.

The RT-248 is expected to find wide use in the natural gas, petroleum and petrochemical industries. A variation of this gas turbine is also expected to provide electric power, both for homes and industry, and to power ships. Plans for municipal electric plants with this gas turbine are now under study.

Less than four hours are needed to remove the jet engine section and replace it when necessary. Conventional engines require weeks of shut-down for overhaul.
