The Medical Roundup

Page's Disease - Many correspondents ask me, 'What is Page's disease of the bones, and what can I do for it?' Page's disease appears to be an inflammation of one or more bones of the body, sometimes a leg bone, sometimes a part of the skull. Often the skin over the bone is overly warm to the touch. X-ray examination generally shows that the bone is thickened and enlarged a bit. The inflammation may cause pain. In many cases the person never knew he had the disease until it was discovered accidentally, when an x-ray man made a film for some reason or other. In those cases I think the person should not be too frightened because the disease may never bother him, and it won't kill him. Seeing that the disease is hereditary, and the mechanism of it is unknown, we haven't any logical treatment for it. Hence, in most cases the main treatment must be for pain. Plenty of aspirin should help. FDA Orders Hoxsey To Quit Through the years many people have written to ask me why, if the medical profession was sure that Hoxsey's medicine (a laxative with a little iodide) was no effect on cancer his so-called clinic wasn't closed up. An answer was given by the author of that remarkable book on the so-called "Dr." Brinkley. For years Brinkley kept raking in millions of dollars from unhappy people of the sort who will say, 'Yes, I know he is a ruthless quack with no knowledge of medicine, but when you are desperate and no doctor will promise you anything, why not risk $500 on a gamble that he may have something?' And, as the author of the book pointed out, when a man is making millions, and has a dozen able lawyers with strong political connections, reaching up even into Washington, D.C., it is almost impossible to make him obey the laws against swindling, and against practicing medicine without any knowledge of the art. It is easy to get around the law against the unlicensed practice of medicine. All a person has to do is to hire a few old broken-down, poor specimens of doctors to serve as a front for him. They form the Clinic, while the layman behind the scenes talks the suckers into paying, each of them, several hundreds of dollars for a worthless minor operation, or a few cents' worth of a laxative, or (according to government plain ordinary water) this last 'cure for cancer' was sold to thousands of patients. After 10 years of expensive effort, F. D. A. Chief, George P. Larrick, announces that the person who ostensibly was running the "Clinic" in Dallas where Hoxsey's medicine was sold, has agreed to close up and quit. Larrick said that 'It is estimated that cancer patients have paid over $50 million for this worthless treatment.' Someone will immediately take his place because more than half of our people love quacks and quackery; they want someone to go to when they are hopelessly ill. When that day comes, they want someone 'to do something' and promise something. The Growth Hormone Many years ago my old friend and fellow mountaineer, Professor Herbert

Family Escapes Fire in Portland

Portland - (UPI) - A family of six escaped from their burning home in night clothes early today. Flames and smoke from the fire, which broke out about dawn, awakened the children of Walter Hufschmidt and the youngsters' cries awakened the parents, firemen said.

Packed Snow, Ice Dot Oregon Highways

Salem - (UPI) - The State Highway Department today reported packed snow at Governor's Junction, Willamette Pass, Meacham and Austin. There were icy spots at numerous locations, including Astoria and Tillamook.

DANGEROUS DRIVER

Burton Joyce, England - (UPI) - Oliver Joyce wasn't allowed to take his scheduled driver's test today. He's barred from driving for three months for driving dangerously during his first test.

Evans of the University of California, and his group, isolated from the pituitary gland at the base of the brain and above the cavity of the nose, a chemical which, when given to a little dachshund, soon turned him into a great big hound. As I have said before in this column, we doctors immediately wanted to get hold of some of this hormone to help short boys to grow taller. Some of the hormone was made from the easily available pituitary glands of cattle, but soon it was found that this variety of the drug is so different from that of men that it has little if any effect on boys. Then, some of the chemical was made from human pituitaries and this worked beautifully. With it an 11-year-old girl soon grew 4 1/4 inches. Because it is so very desirable that some very short children grow taller, Dr. Robert F. Escamilla of San Francisco, has started a pituitary bank. All that a kindly person needs do is to instruct his family that immediately after his (or her) death the pituitary gland be removed and turned over to the 'bank.' Because the amount of the human growth hormone as yet available is so very small, no one should write me for some; I haven't any and it is not for sale anywhere.
