People tell me they have had their indigestion blamed on a gastritis, and now they want to know how they can get cured. Almost always when I can have the person's stomach x-rayed or can see the films he brings, I cannot see anything definitely wrong with the stomach, and I have been looking at stomach films for 50 years.

Some 30 years ago and I distinguished friend, Dr. Rudolf Schindler, popularized gastroscopy - the looking into the stomach with a lighted tube passed down through the gullet - there was much discussion of "gastritis," and thousands of people were told that they had it. But many stomach specialists finally concluded, as I did, that there is no definite group of symptoms that always goes with the little changes in the appearance of the inner lining of the stomach.

As a result, I never can say to a person who comes in complaining of a certain type of indigestion, "From your symptoms I would say you have gastritis." Also, when a man
