NERVOUS FRIENDS - San Francisco Patrolman Horace Young makes friends (a bit nervously, perhaps) with a kinkajou with a yen for travel. The animal was first found in Daly City, south of San Francisco, and turned over to police officer Al Nicolini, but escaped from him and was later picked up by a motorist in San Francisco who turned it over to Patrolman Young. Young gave it back to Nicolini. (UPI Telephone)

Milk Regulations Talked at Meet

Salem - Because most state regulations have been "very general," it is "difficult to draw the line as to what is acceptable in milk products," said Ken Carl, assistant chief of the division of foods and dairies, weights and measures at the ninth annual milk sanitarians short course held Dec. 1 in the State Department of Agriculture. "Labeling food products becomes more difficult all the time," said Carl who spoke on the "fluid milk standard of identity and labeling." Carl said a need had been created to "hold down" on the type of labeling and advertising being done, in order to keep it truthful and factual.
