Boom in Thrift Partly Blamed for Business Slack

Washington – (UPI) – Savings are booming if business isn't.

The thrift boom is at least partly responsible for the present slack in many lines of business.

Government statistics show Americans have more than $307 billion – a record – in savings. Recently, the figures indicate, they have been adding to their savings at a faster rate.

Shown in Reports

These facts were pointed up by two reports from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, a government agency which regulates savings and loan associations.

A third report showed manufacturing firms' sales and profits tumbled during the summer.

The trend toward thrift undoubtedly has contributed to the slump in manufacturing which began early in the summer and is expected to continue for some months. When consumers save more, they spend less. When they buy less, stores purchase fewer goods from factories.

One of the bank board reports showed that by Sept. 30 Americans had accumulated a record $306,954,000,000 in major forms of savings: thrift deposits, life insurance, Treasury savings bonds.

In addition, millions of families have built up investments in their own homes worth billions of dollars. Many families consider monthly mortgage and life insurance payments their only form of regular savings.

The report showed that in July, August and September the savings total rose by $4.3 billion – an unusually large increase for summer months when people usually are spending heavily on vacations.
