Zoo at Home By Evelyn P. Johnson

When the weather is too stormy to go to the zoo, ask Mother to let you set up your own zoo.

Stick four old match stems in one side of a potato for legs. A short piece of pipe cleaner added at one end makes a good tail and may be shaped to suit your wishes. Two black buttons on the other end form the eyes. A mouth can be made by scraping off a curved line of the potato's skin. Make ears or horns from small bits of paper, and glue them in place.

The length of the legs and the shape of the tail, mouth, and ears determine the type of animal you make. With imagination and your own ideas, you'll soon have a zoo at home!

Blow Away!

By Ragna Eskil

Place six peanuts on a chair. Each player tries to blow them off with one breath. He has three turns. The most successful wins.

Let's Draw an Ostrich

By Ann Davidow

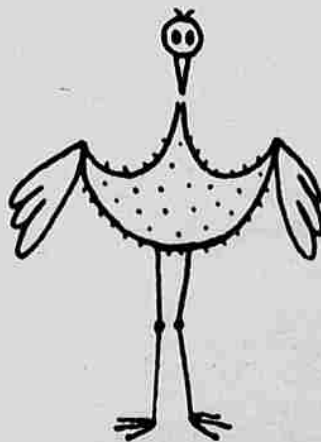

A circle drawn most any place could be a ball that flies through space.

A tiny "V," but slightly tall, hangs beneath our flying ball.

A sort of anchor fits below to keep the shape from moving so.

But we've really caught the pitch when we've made a quaint ostrich!
