164 Permits Issued In Prospect Area

A total of 164 cutting permits, representing 355 Christmas trees, were issued at the Prospect ranger station in Rogue River National forest during the past three week ends, the ranger station reported today.

The trees were offered without cost as a service to residents of the area who combined a family outing with selection of a Christmas tree, rangers said.

The free tree offering is part of an extensive thinning program in the Prospect district. The thinning is designed to increase the growth of trees left standing by reducing the competition from slower growing trees, ranger explained.

District personnel are planning the thinning program in the Prospect flat area so that Christmas trees will be available on the same basis for several years in the future.
