All-Americans Prepare For Shrine Grid Classic

By HAL WOOD
San Francisco — (UPI) — The old practice grid was under way in the camps of both the East and West Saturday as All-America football players prepared for warfare in the Shrine classic on Dec. 31.

Kilmer To Lead West

By HAL WOOD
United Press International
San Francisco — (UPI) — The West will have just about all its eggs in one basket when it lines up against the East in the annual Shrine All-Star grid classic here on Dec. 31.

Or, more properly, everything will be in the hands of Billy Kilmer, UCLA's none-such tailback.

Kilmer will be groomed to carry the ball, pass, run, block, kick — and even call the signals.

"He's one of the very finest," says coach Bill Barnes, who handled the athlete at UCLA and is head coach for the West this year. "He's truly an all-American."

Quadruple Threat
"He can do everything. He can run and he can pack the ball. He is a fine passer. He is a very good punter. And he can call the signals."

So what kind of a formation is Barnes concocting for this youngster?

"It will be a little bit of everything," says Barnes. "We will use the T-formation with flankers. We'll use spread formations. Maybe even a bit of the old double wing. But not much of the single wing."

Barnes isn't worried about what Kilmer will do with all these formations.

"He's worked in them all — either on defense or offense," says the coach. "And he's a fine signal caller. He played at T-formation while in junior college; and the wing with us at UCLA."

Brains Will Win
Barnes figures he's going to have to out-smart the East to win.

"We have a good squad," he says, "but generally speaking, the East always will be a little stronger than the West. They have many more colleges and much more population to choose from. And this year, particularly, they will be quite a bit larger than our boys."

Assisting Barnes on the West team will be coach Abe Martin from Texas Christian and coach Joe Verducci from San Francisco State.

"We won't install the spread formations until Martin gives the final word," says Barnes. "He's an expert on the subject because he has been using it for many years — and in most seasons he ends up in a bowl game. As a matter of fact, I'm pleasantly surprised to find him here with us this year."

When it came time for parting, the tears in Mike's eyes glistened as much as they did in tiny Dave's.

The first automobile, a Benz, was exhibited at the World's Fair in Paris in 1889, the year the Eiffel Tower opened.

Sonny Enders Will Promote Ring Cards Here

Medford state athletic commission has licensed Sonny Enders, Madras, as matchmaker to promote professional wrestling and boxing cards here, Chairman Victor David announced.

Enders is the promoter at Klamath Falls and Bend. Word from Enders on his plans for matches has not been received. It is understood, however, that he has discussed with National Guard officials use of the Medford Armory.

The athletic commission at its meeting last week voted to transfer $300 from its funds for distribution among veterans organizations here. This is in accordance with state law. The funds are from receipts of past boxing and wrestling promotion here. Six per cent of the gross gate from such events goes to the commission.

OWENS HAS EVERYONE GUESSING
Long Beach, Calif. — (UPI) — Jim Owens is a football coach who keeps everyone guessing — and that includes his own Washington Huskies as they prepare for the Rose Bowl game against Minnesota Jan. 2.

"Right now I wouldn't attempt to name a starting lineup," says Owens. Of course he could, if he had a mind to come up with a pretty accurate list. But this is his way. He doesn't want any player to feel secure or smug in his job. During the regular season, Owens stimulated intra-squad competition with what he calls the "challenge system."

If a second string guard, J. Shoulderdap Molekin, thinks he can beat out G. Cleathred Nudnick, for the No. 1 job, he goes to the coaching staff and says, "Let me at dat mug!" Or words and names to that effect.

PLAYERS BLAST AWAY
Both players don helmets, and while the coaches stand by with pencil and paper to take notes, blast away at each other, head-to-head and nose-to-nose, trying to take the opponent out of a mythical play.

After they've had enough of this sort of mayhem, bucking at one another like a couple of wounded water buffalo, the lads take a rest.

Then a ballplayer is selected to take part in the audition. First one of the competitors gets three shots at the ballcarrier, who merely tries to save his own skin. Then the other guard takes his three shots at the ball carrier. The coaches rate each of the guards on a point system to decide who has the No. 1 job.

Owens has not indulged in the "challenge system" here because he's been too busy getting the squad ready for the Minnesota game, but all the players know the occasion to defend their jobs from some ambitious youngster may come up at any time.

Owens carries his "keep 'em guessing" program to his relations with sports writers. Three Seattle area reporters are allowed to watch practice sessions, but they are a lonely little band and presumably had to go through a rigid security check to qualify.

The young Washington coach will let down the bars at practice Wednesday and admit "foreign" reporters, but the odds are that the Huskies won't do much more than go through calisthenics.

INGO STUDIES FILMS
Stockholm, Sweden — (UPI) — Ingemar Johansson will study films of his first two bouts with Floyd Patterson in order to avoid mistakes in his third little fight with the champion in Miami Beach, Fla., next March. Johansson, writing a signed article in the Rekord, owned by his manager, Ed-win Ahlqvist, said he would especially enjoy viewing movies of the first fight which gave him the title.
