Church Held Liable For Injury To Bingo Player
Mabel paid a dollar to play in a bingo game being conducted in a church basement. Although she was not a member of the church, she attended in response to publicity circulated to attract a crowd. The game was conducted solely for the purpose of making money for use in the church's various activities.

Unfortunately, the chair in which Mabel sat while playing was not in good repair. It collapsed and she was injured. She brought an action against the church to obtain damages for her injuries. The church defended on the basis of "charitable immunity," a doctrine which provides an immunity to charitable institutions regarding any tortious act committed by their agents. This exists as an effort to protect trust funds of charitable institutions.

THE COURT HELD: The supreme court of an eastern state, in this 1960 case, however, held that the church was liable. It reasoned that immunity from liability depended upon whether or not the church was engaged in the charitable purposes for which it was founded at the time the injury occurred. In this case, the court held that the church was conducting a "game of chance" as a business enterprise; therefore, it was liable and must respond in damages.

NO DOLLS, PLEASE—Reaching for a book to read in her room in London is four-year-old Penelope Gouk, who receives no toys for Christmas. The problem of Penelope's parents is this: Their daughter is a genius and she just isn't interested in dolls and playthings. Penelope hasn't entered school yet, but education officials examined her and suggested that, mentally, Penelope might find high school subjects "just her cup of tea."

BLM Starts Program To Streamline Land Use and Management

Washington (CQ)—A $4.1 billion 52-year program to streamline the management and use of nearly 500 million acres of public lands has been launched by the Bureau of Land Management, the principal custodian of the public domain. But it's headed for trouble in Congress.

The program is called Project 2012 and its aim is to streamline the management and use of nearly 500 million acres of public lands. In addition, it surveys all federal lands, manages publicly owned mineral resources on private land and carries on numerous joint management activities with other federal agencies.

The program would be of special interest to Alaska where nearly 300 million acres of the Bureau's 477 million acres are located. About 177 million acres lie in 11 western states and 119,000 in other parts of the country.
