Huge Program for Distressed Areas To Be Suggested

Washington, Dec. 29 — John F. Kennedy's special task force, created to study the economic problems of distressed areas, will recommend to the President a massive program designed to create jobs and ease the hardships of the unemployed.

Indonesians Are Developing New National Dialect

Jakarta, Indonesia — 800,000 A new language, more than 90 million people is being born in Southeast Asia, at the rate of about a word every hour.

It is developing in two directions. Constant expansion and improvement of the version of Malay spoken in Indonesia.

The governments of Malaysia and Indonesia are in constant touch trying to unify their similar languages into a standard common one.

When Indonesia became independent after World War II, it had no national language. The nearest tongue to one was Malay, spoken by about 77 per cent of the population. The rest, scattered over 17,000 islands, spoke about 200 other dialects.

Greatly Expanded But in recent years, Indonesia has greatly expanded Malay, which in its original form was considered too comprehensive enough for a modern society.

Many new phrases are added daily, and even native speakers of the original language are sometimes hard pressed to keep up with the developments of their language.

Indonesian "language commission" has the job of thinking up new words. The commission meets once a fortnight and each session produces at least 10 new words or phrases in addition to those that stream into the language from other sources.

Indonesian, as it exists now, has adapted words from practically all of the country's dialects and from many foreign sources. Foreign words are frequently used to express scientific ideas and new concepts.

Spanish Christmas Season Ends Jan. 6 Madrid — The climax of the Christmas season in Spain comes Jan. 6, the "Dia de los Reyes Magos" — Day of the Kings or Epiphany — when the Spanish equivalent of Santa Claus arrives.

Children anticipate the day for weeks. On Epiphany Eve, they place their shoes on balconies or near the front door and fill them with straw or grain for the Kings' horses. The next day they find the shoes filled with gifts.

On Christmas Day itself, no gifts are exchanged, generally speaking, although it is customary on that day to remember those who have rendered service during the year with gifts of money. The recipients include porters, elevator boys, newsboys, postmen, police and others.

Science Doctorate Degrees Increasing Washington, (Science Service) — The number of doctorate degrees awarded in the United States during the year 1959 reached an all-time high of more than 5,300.

The average age of these new doctorate holders was 23½ years when they received their degree. The average period from the time of awarding a bachelor's degree to awarding the doctorate was 8½ years.

Chemistry doctorates were highest, with 1,062 doctorates awarded during 1959 and 1960. It was found in a study by the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council and reported by the National Science Foundation.
