Lovely Picture Star Spends Time Pining Away For Absent Boy-Friend

Hollywood — UPI — You'd think a beautiful 19-year-old blonde movie star would be living on a pink cloud. But Carol Lynley is staked out in a dreary hotel room with nothing to do but watch television — mainly because she is in love and about to be married.

A peculiar combination of girl and woman, the pink-cheeked youngster is working in a new movie — which she doesn't particularly like — and pining away for her fiancé who lives in New York.

"I love California," said Carol with heavy sarcasm. "Who wouldn't love the smog, the traffic, the December heat wave and the palm trees? I can hardly wait to get back to New York."

Fears Wolves — You'd almost think it was California's fault that Carol and boyfriend Michael Selsman are separated. And in a way it is. Local customs and wolves keep her in near solitary confinement.

"I can't go out to movies here because I've already seen the new ones which get to New York first," Carol said. "And it's not safe to go out alone because of all the wolves. No matter what time of the day or night somebody is always trying to pick me up. But if I go out with a male friend the gossips have us going steady. I've been out here three weeks this trip, and I have another three weeks to go. It seems like three months."

Portland Slum Clearance Voted

Portland — UPI — The Portland Housing Authority's board of commissioners has approved development of slum-clearance and public housing program for the Albina area. The project is designed to replace substandard housing

Ocean Research Gets $100,000 Boost at College

Corvallis — Ocean research being conducted off Oregon by Oregon State College has received a $100,000 boost. The new research grant from National Science Foundation will be used to start the first comprehensive inventory of plant and animal life in Oregon ocean waters and to help operate the OSC research vessel, Acona, during 1961.

The Acona is now in final stages of construction in Portland and will be ready about May for a continuing and regular series of ocean fact-finding cruises, according to Dr. Wayne V. Burt, head of the OSC oceanography department.

OSC is one of 10 schools selected by the Office of Naval Research to conduct a giant 10-year program of research in waters surrounding the U.S. Schools are strategically located along the East and West Coasts and Gulf of Mexico.

Leaders of Studies — Leaders for the new studies on ocean plant and animal life off Oregon will be Dr. Herbert Frolander and Dr. William G. Pearcy.

Frolander is one of the nation's top experts on plankton — the microscopic-size plants and animals that drift with the currents and that are the "basic food stuff" for all ocean life, including the bigger fish and whales. Pearcy is a specialist on larger marine animals.

Their studies will provide new information about fish and plant populations, seasonal and time-of-day variations, and nutrients levels in the water. The Acona will be equipped with special gear that will permit them to probe down to and along the ocean floor.

The Office of Naval Research has given OSC more than half-a-million dollar grants in the past three years to build the $177,000 Acona, to expand basic research on the Oregon ocean, and to help train oceanographers.

Local Physicians To Attend Meeting

Dr. M. S. Byers and Dr. June Peters Byers of Medford plan to attend a special medical symposium in Portland Jan. 11. Prominent authorities on obstetrics and gynecology will report on results of research in those two fields of medicine.

More than 30 family doctors are expected to attend the symposium, which is sponsored by the Oregon Academy of General Practice, under a grant by Lederle Laboratories, as part of a program of post-graduate studies to keep abreast of recent advances in medicine.

with at least 109 housing units of one to four bedrooms. The public housing units are scheduled to be designed for families of low income.
