OF SMITH & MEN

By Jack Smith
(c) 1960 - Times-Mirror Syndicate

It's not an easy philosophy to sell, but I'm thinking of organizing a retrogression movement.

Our political position will be somewhat to the right of reactionary.

Human beings seem to be the victims either of inertia or the compulsion to push on ever forward, into the unknown.

Few have the sense to pick their way cautiously backward over pathways lighted by experience.

Standing still is a bore. Going forward is sometimes a lark, but according to our new prophets, the physicists, unless the race develops hitherto undemonstrated qualities of prudence we are heading for the abyss.

The word "progress" is the political catchword of the hour.

"Forward! Forward!" cry the charlatans in idiotic unison.

The motto of my group will be "Back! Back-for Heaven's sake-before it's too late!"

Maybe that's a little long to put on a lapel pin, but it's honest.

Nobody wants to go all the way back, of course. Our course would be one of discriminatory retrogression. We propose to strike a nice balance between the ingenious conveniences of the present and the uncomplicated blessings of the past.

We don't expect to pick out some date in history and say "That's it-stop the clock."

Running back through the old almanacs I haven't found any particular day that was perfect, although June 17, 1755, was fair enough for the slave trade and the French and Indian War.

We might have to select something from one century and something else from another.

I'd like, for example, to have an 18th century Georgian house with a 6th century Byzantine bath, a 16th century Florentine garden and a modern car opener.

In men's wear I favor returning to the Roman toga for formal occasions, although I would like to see the things equipped with zippers and pockets. We need a place to carry our credit cards.

For business wear I would suggest the poplin shorts and blouses in which the ruddy English colonized half the world, although they were forever being stung on the knees and elbows.

There's no point in deciding what women should wear. In 90 days they would lower the hem, raise the hem, widen the gusset, slash the neck, take in the waist, let out the hip, dye it or give it to the Salvation Army anyway.

I wouldn't go back far enough to deprive women of the vote and the right to enter saloons and order sidecars. It might be worth trying, but I'm afraid we'd just have to go through the suffragette uprising all over again. A lot of fine backbars and pickle jars would get busted.

I wouldn't mind going to work on a horse-drawn streetcar. This vehicle seems to me to perfectly exemplify the harmonious use of old and new to the pleasure and convenience of man.

When the horse was sick I could stay home and watch television. TV would be all right if we didn't have any cigarettes, toothpaste, razors or deodorants yet.

With my knowledge of the middle 20th century I could write science fiction about the Hydrogen Age.

But nobody would believe me.

BLM Office Here Receives Citation From President

The Medford district of the bureau of land management was awarded a presidential citation Thursday for its record of participation in meeting the goals of President Eisenhower's committee on employment of the physically handicapped.

Making the presentation on behalf of the President and Gov. Mark O. Hatfield was George A. Reid, information officer of the 11th civil service region, Seattle. Victor A. Newman of the state employment service represented Governor Hatfield's committee.

Reid commended both District Manager Ross A. Youngblood and Administrative Assistant, John J. Mannely, for their support of the program. It was pointed out that the award was the only one of its kind to be given to a government agency in Oregon during the past year.

The citation reads: "The President's committee on employment of the physically handicapped confers this employer's merit award upon the bureau of land management district forestry office, Medford, Oregon, in view of exceptional accomplishments in extending more opportunities through selective placement in useful employment of physically handicapped employees and assisting in every feasible way to acquaint the public and employers with these principles."

The goal of the program is to utilize to the fullest extent possible the talents and skills possessed by the so-called physically handicapped thereby increasing available manpower and avoiding waste of valuable experience and skills.

Courtesy Cab company of Medford, which last week received authorization from the state public utilities commission to travel anywhere in Oregon from Medford, officially inaugurated its expanded service Friday.

Prior to the PUC ruling, the company could only operate in an area inside a three-mile radius of the city. John H. Hill, of Courtesy Cab, said this restriction often inconvenienced riders who wanted to go farther than the cab could legally take them.

"Now we can take passengers wherever they want to go," Hill said. Courtesy Cab is a relatively new company in the city, having started operations last April. They now have four cabs and are located at 204 North Front st. in the Grand hotel.
