

Clear Vision Is Needed For Learning Educator Tells AAUW Members

"One of the most urgent needs for learning is clear vision," according to Mrs. Maxine (Paul R.) Smith, immediate past president of Oregon Education Association.

Quoting H. V. van Dyke, she continued, "The true object of education should be to train one to think clearly and act right." In a talk to Medford branch of American Association of University Women last Wednesday.

Presented in the home of Mrs. Stuart V. McQueen, Mrs. Smith's speech was titled "Education Washes the Windows," and followed the branch's theme for the year, "Windows to the World." After graphically describing American wealth in relation to the rest of the world, Mrs. Smith said, "We know as stated in Luke, 'Everyone to whom much is given, of him will much be required.'"

"In the coming years and generations, the faith of mankind will depend upon the United States, and especially upon American educators."

Recalls Speech
Mrs. Smith told of a speech by Charles Malik, then president of the General Assembly of the United Nations, at the St. Louis convention of the National Education Association. He said that respect, equality, humanity, love, and brotherhood abide at the base of American life and culture. It is possible, therefore, to hold that despite temptation and difficulty and the dangers of complacency, ease, and comfort, America will in the end communicate with and win the heart and mind of the East.

Ways in which our schools are already promoting better understanding of the world, including stimulating interest in international relations, learning to enjoy artistic differences, and learning to communicate, were described by Mrs. Smith. She also told how parents and other citizens can help.

Concrete Meaning
"We who know that all over the world peoples are striving for a new and fuller meaning of life, we must accept this most important challenge to give concrete meaning to the idea of neighborliness. Physically we have planned time and space with jet planes. Let us all decide that we must help develop the minds of men so that understanding, mutual respect and wisdom of action will also build bridges so that neighbors may communicate and work together throughout the world," Mrs. Smith concluded.

Assisting the hostess at the meeting were Mrs. Thomas McCamant, Mrs. S. C. Jones Jr., Mrs. Samuel Poirier, and Mrs. Ralph A. Wiese.

The annual children's play sponsored by AAUW will be a children's fantasy, "Many Moons," by James Thurber. Mrs. Dale C. Prentice, co-chairman of the play, announced that Southern Oregon college players, directed by Dr. Dorothy Stolp, will give the play in Medford on February 7. Proceeds from it goes toward the fellowship fund.

The next general meeting of AAUW will be the following luncheon February 18.

Careers In Coloring Increasing

Chicago - (UPI) - Women with an eye for color can make it pay up to $15,000 a year, according to Mrs. Betty Schoenberg, national color coordinator of a large mail order house's (Sears Roebuck & Co.) home furnishings lines.

Mrs. Schoenberg's job is to advise her company on what colors to feature in upholstery, rugs, draperies and accessories. To do this, she must keep abreast of the changing tastes of homemakers, yet be able to recognize a color trend from a fad.

In Mrs. Schoenberg's case, this ability stems from a natural talent for choosing pleasing combinations of colors, plus both a college and professional education in art, architecture and the theories of color. She called a natural sense of color even more important than education in its use.

"You have to be able to judge color the way the home-maker does, with her eyes," Mrs. Schoenberg said.

Job's Increase
According to Mrs. Schoenberg, there is an increasing number of jobs in her field, and women as well as men can get such jobs with furniture manufacturers, fabric and rug mills.

"But many of the opportunities in this field have to be made," she said. She suggested becoming an interior decorator as a start.

"After a decorating course in a home economics college or professional art school, go to work in a department store," Mrs. Schoenberg advised. She began her career arranging table settings in a Chicago department store.

She suggested making the break from interior decorating into color coordinating by taking a job with a manufacturer of furniture, fabrics or carpets.

"You may be hired to arrange showrooms," she said. "But keep coming up with sound advice on color and the manufacturer may recognize the need for a color coordinator."

White House Restoration Includes Elaborate Heating

By ROSE McKEE
Washington - If the young children of President-Elect and Mrs. John F. Kennedy catch cold, it should not be because of drafts or chill in the White House.

The executive mansion now has the most modern and elaborate equipment for keeping all the rooms at an even temperature - whether there are two or 2,000 persons in a room. Fine, new air conditioning equipment provides the same comfort for torrid summer days. The new equipment was put in during the Truman administration restoration of the White House.

Lorenzo S. Winslow, White House architect for 19 years, which encompassed the rebuilding period, said the family rooms used to have steam heat and radiators.

"Were they as ugly as most old radiators?" he was asked by an interviewer from the National Association of Home Builders.

"Worse," replied Winslow, a man of few but emphatic words.

Even in its earliest days, the White House lacked some conveniences common to the period. Mrs. John Adams, the second First Lady and the first to live in the White House, complained of the great difficulty in keeping fires going in the open grates "to secure us from the daily agues." She also described the lack of bells to call servants "to assist us in this great castle."

Many Complain
Mrs. Adams wasn't the only occupant to complain of drafts and colds. President Andrew Jackson, referring to one area, reportedly remarked, "Hell itself couldn't heat that corner."

But now all is snug and warm in winter. The public rooms on the ground and first floors - which are the ones open to tourists - have separate heating, ventilating, and air conditioning systems. They are designed to provide comfort for as many as the 2,000 who might go through the big East room at large receptions.

The family quarters on the other two floors have their own, similar equipment. Some of the heating and air conditioning units have ducts large enough for two men to sit abreast in them. All the rooms are warmed by pre-heated air, and the family rooms have hot water convectors as well. They are concealed in the walls.

While Mrs. Adams lacked bells to summon maids, the Kennedys should have no such communication problems. They will find intercom phones in their rooms.

The White House also has an elaborate water supply, including a separate chilled water system for drinking fountains.

Carried Water
When John Adams moved into the White House, water had to be carried by hand from a spring in a park about six city blocks away. In 1883 a pipe was laid from the park to the White House to provide running water. It was not until 1859 that water was piped in from the Potomac river.

Winslow said that when Mr. Kennedy wants to use the White House elevator, he will not have to wait - as did President Franklin D. Roosevelt on occasion - for domestic employees to disembark from it, at times carrying linens, dishes, or other household articles. There is now an elevator for the special use of domestic help.

Usually, Mr. Roosevelt did not have to wait, for when he left his office in the West Wing to go to the residential quarters, the Secret Service signalled that he was on his way, and the elevator was held. But now and then, Mr. Roosevelt would have to wait - or ride with the butler or other help, which, it is said, he did not mind doing.

Tourists in Washington long have admired the White House lawns. Many are unaware that under a section of the lawn on the Pennsylvania avenue side of the White House are various rooms, such as a carpentry shop, an electrical repair

Dinners Honor Man on Birthday

Gold Hill - William Price was honored at three different dinners in observance of his birthday.

The Rev. and Mrs. Gurnie Noah and sons, Kenneth, William and Raymond, entertained at a dinner given at their home at Merlin December 31.

New Year's day a second dinner was given by the Rev. and Mrs. Charles Pearson and family at the Assembly of God parsonage in Gold Hill. Guests besides Mr. and Mrs. Price were Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Patterson, Rogue River, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Buchanan, Miss Judi Wilson, and Charles Price.

A family reunion and dinner at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. Jerry Reeves and daughters, Karen, Kathy, and Kristi, Central Point was given to celebrate Mr. Price's birthday on Monday.

Mrs. Noah and Mrs. Reeves are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William Price. Charles Price is a son.

New Sheer Wools Described For Spring; Yellow Popular

Los Angeles - New wool fabrics for spring and summer are said to be so sheer that the industry is calling them "nude wools."

Some of the new fabrics are wool velvies, some are leno weaves - meshy and perhaps with a drop-stitch effect - others are spongy and may appear a little heavier than they are, still others are lacy and lofty. An entire dress may weigh less than a pound since the fabric weights range from around four ounces per yard in 36-inch widths to six in 54-inch widths. Among patterned sheers are minute houndstooth checks, clear open checks, small window, pines, small bias plaids and others.

The new woolen fabrics are said to be practical; comfortable on a cool day with jacket, stole or coat, and equally so on a very warm day without. The natural absorbency of wool makes them especially well liked for warm weather wear as does its built-in wrinkle resistance.

Yellow Popular
Color is outstanding in the sheer wool dresses with sunny yellows one of the favorites. Strawberry pinks, clear periwinkle blue, lilac to violet, shrimp pink to coral and orange, turquoise, Irish greens, navy and black are all available. White alone or combined with color is most important, as is pale beige, champagne, straw and other neutrals. The patterned fabrics are often in a color with white, as black and white, yellow and white, lilac and white, etc.

Dress styles tend to be simple and "ladylike," with soft, fluid lines predominating. There's more than a hint of influence from the 30s and those familiar with the 20s may also breathe a nostalgic sigh over some of the fashions. Overblouses, dropped waistlines, easy fit, tied belts and
