Investigators Study Charges That FDA Neglected Public

Washington - (UPI) - New charges that the Food and Drug administration neglected the public welfare by taking tardy action against a drug used in illegal abortions were being studied today by Senate investigators.

In a memorandum submitted Thursday to the Senate drug investigating subcommittee, Dr. Barbara Moulton, a former FDA official, charged that the agency knew for 3 1/2 years that the drug potassium permanganate was causing needless pain, even death, but did nothing about it.

The FDA last summer banned over-the-counter sales of the drug except in greatly diluted solutions.

Dr. Moulton also criticized the FDA for allowing the sale of candy-flavored aspirin for children which she described as "one of the biggest killers."

She said the aspirin should be banned.

The memorandum said the FDA had received letters from physicians "begging" for a ban on over-the-counter sales of bromides. She said no government action was taken despite what she called "sufficient evidence" to support a ban.

"Probably several hundred men and women in this country every year are mistakenly diagnosed as insane and committed to mental hospitals, sometimes for months, as a result of self-medication with these bromide drugs, which are sold without prescription, in spite of the practically unanimous opinion of the medical profession that they should be restricted to prescription sale," she said.

Dr. Moulton said the abortion drug was not banned until she asked Health Secretary Arthur S. Flemming to investigate it. She said FDA medical experts had recommended the ban as far back as 1957 to Food and Drug Commissioner George P. Larrick.

"Secretary Flemming hadas far as I know no evidence in 1960 not available to Mr. Larrick 3 1/2 years ago," she said. "The long delay in taking action as simple as the publication of a statement of policy seems to me clear evidence of neglect of the public welfare."

Dr. Moulton said the drug was being used illegally by nonmedical people in the mistaken belief it would cause abortion.

"It will not," she said. "Instead it destroys the walls of the vagina, causing profuse bleeding which has resulted in some instances in death, in others in such severe scarring that normal childbirth was subsequently impossible."

Dr. Moulton was formerly chief of the FDA's drug and device branch until she quit in a dispute over the agency's policies last year.

Chairman Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.) ordered her statement included in the public record of his Senate antitrust and monopoly subcommittee, which is conducting a broad investigation of the drug industry and its regulation by the government.

CONVOY PATROL - A convoy of police Jeeps patrol the streets of Li Louvriere, Belgium, to prevent strike rioting. Hammarskjold To Speak Today on Congo Situation

United Nations, N.Y. - (UPI) - Britain accused Russia today of using its charges of Belgian interference in the Congo as part of a campaign to wreck the United Nations.

British Ambassador Sir Patrick Dean joined French delegate Pierre Millet and Turkish Ambassador Turgut Menemencioğlu in telling the Security Council they believed Russia's charge against Belgium was unfounded.

Russia had complained that on New Year's Day Congolese troops were permitted to use the U.N. trust territory of Ruanda-Urundi, of which Belgium is the administering power, for the start of an attack on forces of deposed Premier Patrice Lumumba. Ambassador Valerian A. Zorin demanded that Belgium be stripped of the trust territory.

Dean said it was noticeable how little of the Soviet complaint dealt with the actual incident in Ruanda-Urundi. Instead, he said, Zorin had stressed colonialism, color discrimination in international policy, and "even managed to slip in a grace note about the strikes in Belgium."

Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold sped from Africa to attend today's debate.

He was expected to speak this afternoon.

Hammarskjold's statement to the council was expected to summarize talks he has had with President Joseph Kasavubu and other Congolese leaders in Leopoldville.

Russia asked the council to consider its charges that the U.N. Congo command permitted Congolese troops loyal to Kasavubu to be sent from the Belgian-administered trust territory of Ruanda-Urundi to attack forces loyal to Soviet-backed deposed Premier Patrice Lumumba.

Belgian Ambassador Walter Loridan told the council his government granted transit rights through Ruanda-Urundi, which is east of the Congolese province of Kivu, for "100 or so" Congolese troops at the request of Kasavubu. He contended that this did not violate U.N. orders. Kivu is a stronghold of pro-Lumumba forces.

The United Arab Republic was preparing a resolution which informed sources said was mild enough to perhaps be accepted by both Russia and the West and thus avoid another bitter wrangle over the Congo.

Soviet Ambassador Valerian A. Zorin asked Thursday that Belgium be stripped of its administrative power over Ruanda-Urundi and again demanded immediate withdrawal of all Belgians from the Congo.

Trailers, Signs Discussed By Planning Commission

The Medford city planning commission last night made several recommendations to the city council, which, if adopted, would prohibit the use of trailer houses as residences in the city except when they are in designated trailer camps.

The commission also called for a public hearing on a proposed revision to the city's sign ordinance in limited commercial zones. The changes in the sign ordinance, the commission hopes, will provide for more "realistic" regulation of trailer houses into town.

Regarding trailer houses, the commission moved to strike out those city code provisions relating to the conversion of trailer houses into residences.

The commission recommended the addition of a provision to the code, which provides, in part, that removing the wheels or setting the trailer on posts or footings shall not exempt the trailer from the provisions of the ordinance.

The new regulations would not apply to those trailers being used as residences prior to the adoption of the changes in the code.

The revisions to the city's sign ordinance in limited commercial zones have been necessitated mainly by the signs in the Medford shopping center. Most of these are now much larger than the city code would normally permit.

However, the city has not felt they should enforce the code, in this case, because it was not designed to regulate shopping center signs. Signs in shopping centers are generally set back much further from the streets than signs on the average commercial business.

The new revisions would not automatically make all the signs in the shopping center legal. Some of them will still be in violation of the code. But, the commission feels that they will make the sign ordinance more realistic.

Under the proposed revisions signs will be limited in size to less than 25 square feet unless it is set back from a distance greater than 20 feet from a lot in a residential zone and 20 feet from a street.

A sign set back more than 20 feet from a lot in a residential zone and 20 feet from a street may be increased in area by an amount not to exceed one square foot for each foot of setback exceeding 20 feet.

Under the code provisions as they now exist, a sign cannot be larger than 25 square feet in area. There is no provision for signs set back a great distance from the street.

The commission has called for a meeting with the city council prior to a public hearing on the proposed sign ordinance in February.
