

They'll Do It Every Time

By Jimmy Hatlo

Family Council

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors. (Copyright 1961—General Features Corp.)

Lola R.—He makes me feel like two cents when we're out with other couples.

Bertram R.—She waits until we're out in public to bring up touchy matters.

Lola R.—What is there about an audience that turns my husband into a brute? At home he's polite and sweet to me. But once we're in a restaurant with another couple or at a party, he'll say things to make the others laugh at me or feel sorry for him—things he's never mentioned at home.

The other evening out with friends, he said I had a lot of nerve leaving the supper dishes for him to do. The truth was that he offered to do them while I dressed. But no one believed me when I said that. Then he managed to get in a few more digs about my weight and my extravagances. I realize that some of the husbands who act lovey-dovey in public may really hate their wives and do nothing but snarl at home. But Bert insists he loves me. Then why does he torture me in front of my friends?

Bertram R.—Lola is sensitive when it comes to her own feelings, but not mine. She doesn't seem to realize that she starts these unpleasant exchanges by bringing up subjects she knows we don't agree on. She waits until she has the protection of our friends, feeling I won't dare to sound off in front of them. Then she'll ask why I didn't give her $50 for a dress or whose fault it was that our dog got run over. About the supper dishes, she had just been bragging to our friends about her efficiency, whereas the truth is the work was so piled up we'd have been an hour late for the appointment if I hadn't rolled up my sleeves and got the mess out of the way.

Sometimes I admit I tease her when we're out. I want to see if she can take it as well as hand it out. But if she's sore at me about anything, she'd better hash it out with me at home, instead of using our friends as her bodyguard and arguing in public.

The Council: This sort of sugar-coated slingshotting between husband and wife is a painful practice not only to the contestants but to the captive audience who must look on, listen and—worst of all—often take sides! Now often has a pleasant social engagement been spoiled by the rancorous airing of a marital grievance which one of the mates didn't dare bring up at home! This happens when the most important thoroughfare to conjugal peace is closed, the Avenue of Communication. Some people can think, feel, dream, but they just can't talk or be talked to. In marriage, this leads to all kinds of subtleties and underhand approaches. Lola and Bertram must open the direct passages to each other and be brave and loving enough to use them.

But a large part of the blame for this relationship must be laid at Bertram's feet. (The Council only "blames" when the remedy is at hand and is easily applicable. Else we don't sit in judgment on frail fellow humans!)

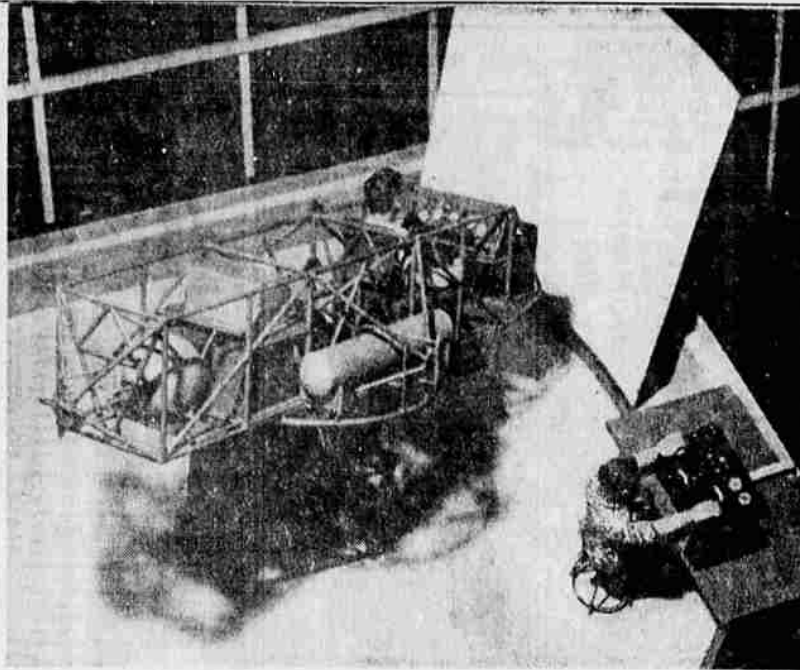

No matter how well a husband and wife get along, no matter how much they say they love each other, they're flops as mates unless they build up each other's "public image." It's no use putting one's best foot forward if a spouse trips one up. Marital fidelity includes the "honors" as well as the love and cherish part of the vow. And it's heartwarming all around to hear one marriage partner sing the praises of the other.

Wall Street Chatter

New York—UPI—A. G. Becker & Co. states that the cyclical nature of the chemical industry should be attractive to investors at this time—if a business turn-around is believed to be near.

The firm forecasts that an improvement in the general tone of chemical demand should permit announcement of some long overdue price increases.

A. G. Becker prefers issues in the group which it says stand to profit most from a general business upturn and which have hidden earnings potentials not now generally recognized.

It says W. R. Grace, Monsanto, Olin Mathieson and Union Carbide fill the bill.

Kidder, Peabody & Co. concludes that National Cash Register continues to be an attractive long term holding for participation in the expanding office equipment field. The firm estimates National Cash earnings for 1960 at $2.50 a share against $2.40 in 1959, and adds that indications point to some further rise in profits during 1961.

The Cauliflower Is a Pretty Ridiculous Vegetable

The cauliflower is about as ridiculous as a vegetable can get; actually it is a monstrosity, an outlandish head of flowerlets; cabbage-like in taste to some small degree, but quaint in shape and as temperamental as it is unusual.

Peculiar that anything so familiar to so many people should be so unusual. Even cauliflower experts, those who know it best and make part or all of their living by raising it, cannot always predict what the vegetable will do under varying circumstances.

Climatic conditions must be favorable if any degree of success is to reward the grower. The vegetable must have cool weather, otherwise it will refuse to develop a "head." Without the head, there is no cauliflower.

The head is produced by the plant with some extra help from the human grower who, when the plant is young (that is, when the flower cluster begins to form) gathers up some of the outer leaves, brings them together over the top and ties them together with a piece of raffia.

Choozy Plant

Inside the little leaf-tent thus formed, the flower head develops; white and tender. The plant is choosy in its preference both as to climate and food requirements. It's considered to be about as finicky as any plant in any garden or field.

The cauliflower is often said to be a "deranged cabbage" and like its relative the cabbage contains some sulphur compounds which produce the disagreeable odor when the vegetable is being cooked. The cauliflower is somewhat milder in flavor than the cabbage and is said to be more easily digested. Technically it has a high water-holding capacity. It is an excellent source of calcium, being about twice as rich in this element as any other vegetable.

The head of the cauliflower, or that part which is supposed to be washed or cooked in an upside-down position, consists of the flowers of the plant. These flower parts are greatly shortened and fleshy. So the "head" is merely the flower stalks, but, having been shaded by the tied-up leaves, it becomes white, solid and tender.

Cook Upside Down
Another and important reason for cooking the head in an upside down position is the possibility that insects as well as sand or bits of leaf are pretty apt to be hidden in among the little florets. Soaking or cooking it in an inverted position tends to dislodge all these unwelcome visitors.

The enjoyment of eating cauliflower, either raw or cooked, is really not something recently discovered, as the ancient Greeks and early Romans were known to be exceedingly fond of this vegetable. Since then, of course, the alert lovers of vegetables have discovered many ways to enhance the mild flavor of this bizarre vegetable.

The cauliflower, as well as the garden cabbage and broccoli, too, is descended from the original wild cabbage. Actually, what you eat when you enjoy cauliflower or broccoli is the flower. These are about the only two vegetables that develop an edible flower, and both are really botanical monstrosities.

RETIRED EDITOR DIES

New York—UPI—Laurence Vale Updegraff, 76, a retired assistant Sunday editor of the New York Times, died Tuesday.

Finch Elected VP Of National Group

Dick Finch, co-owner of the Home Appliance company, Medford, was elected first vice president of the National Appliance and Radio Dealers association (NARDO) at the organization's annual convention in Chicago last week.

Finch was also elected to his third three-year term on the board of directors of the organization. NARDO represents an estimated 15,000 appliance dealers throughout the United States.

There are 30 members on the board of directors, and Finch is the only appliance dealer from the Pacific Northwest serving on the board at the present time.

Finch and his partner, Randall M. Gifford, have been in the appliance business in Medford for 16 years, founding the Home Appliance company here in 1945. Home Appliance company (known as Hapco) now has two stores in Medford, two in Klamath Falls and one in Ashland.

Cigarette Tax Draws Opposition

Salem—UPI—The Oregon Gasoline Dealers Association Tuesday went on record against HB 1003, the 3-cent cigarette tax measure.

The association convention also voted to oppose HB 1010, which would repeal the personal property tax on business inventories, to be replaced with a net business tax.

Virgil Rukke, Portland, was named president to succeed E. A. Haugstad, Salem.
