Navy Chaplain Served the Most Remote Parish

Corpus Christi, Tex. (AP) - Lt. Cmdr. E. R. Weidler, a navy chaplain, believes he has had the most remote congregation in the world.

Weidler, a minister of the Church of Christ, just spent a year in the Antarctic and preached once at the South Pole.

He said he was the first Protestant clergyman to conduct services at the Pole, although a Jesuit priest said Mass there in 1957. The critical weight factor of polar flying limited transportation of chaplains, he said.

Weidler explained that about 20 persons, most of them scientists, stay the year around at the Pole, where the temperature set a new record last year of 127 1/2 degrees below zero.

The chaplain spent only three days at the Pole, and was stationed most of the year at McMurdo Sound in the Antarctic. There the temperature rises as high as 38 degrees during the summer.

Winter readings at McMurdo get as low as 59 below zero, Weidler said, and the weather is very changeable.

"In a few hours it can go from normal to condition zero—which means you stay put," he said. "No one can go outside, and the winds rise to 70 to 80 knots."

Weidler was one of 138 persons who "wintered over" at McMurdo. During the summer the population rises to around 500.

"Morale here is excellent," the chaplain said. "Most of the men are typical sailors who manage their own problems and get along well with others."

He conducted religious services every Sunday at the chapel. The church also housed a lounge and library and Weidler kept it open daily.

Weidler talked with his wife and five children in Texas almost weekly by short-wave radio while serving with Operation Deep Freeze 1960. He had been chaplain at the U. S. Naval Hospital at Corpus Christi for two years before the Antarctic assignment.

Frozen Salt Water Makes Fresh Water

Washington (Science Service) - Fresh water for the exploding population of the earth can be produced from salt water by freezing with ordinary "cooking" gas at a cost of only 19 cents per 1,000 gallons for the power and chemicals.

George Karnofsky of the Blaw-Knox Company, Pittsburgh, Pa., reported these figures at a symposium on saline water conversion at the American Institute of Chemical Engineers meeting here.

Butane is used as a refrigerant and as a melting agent in the process. A pilot plant for further studies is now being built. Preliminary studies indicate that a plant with a ten-million-gallon per day capacity can be built for $20,000,000.

The salt water is frozen and melted with normal butane or isobutane in a closed cycle, providing direct contact between the butane and the water in both freezing and melting steps.

First Astronaut to See Earth 3 Ways

Washington (Science Service) - The first astronaut will have three ways of "looking" at the earth as he orbits around it one hundred miles up. Besides direct vision, he will have a periscope and instruments.

The astronaut will be able to see only an edge of the earth and black space beyond it when he looks through the window in front of his head.

He will not be able to see the whole earth at any time, but will have a periscope between his knees that shows him a view of the earth beneath him as a circle the size of a grapefruit. This will represent an area 1,800 miles in diameter from horizon to horizon at this altitude. Dr. Robert Voss of the Space Task Group, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Langley Field, Va., told Science Service here.

Man Arrested While Walking Straight Line

Dallas, Tex. (AP) - A 45-year-old Dallas man was arrested on a drunkenness charge because he was walking a straight line and smoking.

Officers said the straight line was the yellow stripe on the middle of Main st. He was smoking, all right, two cigarettes—one in each corner of his mouth.
