

Secretary of Labor Held in High Regard by Labor and Management

By United Press International
Arthur J. Goldberg, new labor secretary, believes union-management disputes are similar to marital spats.

find some way of living together in harmony." This conciliatory, long-range approach to industrial relations illustrates why the 52-year-old Goldberg is held in high regard by top management, labor and the intellectual community.

strategy for expelling a dozen Communist-dominated unions from the old CIO and played a vital role in the AFL-CIO merger in 1955.

In addition, the trim, tweedy-looking Goldberg became a leader in organized labor's legislative battles for improved minimum wage, jobless benefits and union reform laws.

Helps Oust Teamsters

He took a major role in ouster of the Teamsters Union from the AFL-CIO in 1957 after acting, in effect, as special prosecutor of Teamsters officials Dave Beck and Jimmy Hoffa.

Born in near-poverty on Aug. 8, 1908, on Chicago's West Side, Goldberg was the youngest of eight children. He was graduated from high school at the age of 15 and admitted to the bar before he was 21. He was graduated from Northwestern Law School, summa cum laude.

For relaxation - when he finds time to relax - Goldberg likes legitimate theater, modern art and horse racing.

The walls of his comfortable brick home are hung with canvases painted by his wife, the former Dorothy Kur-gans, a professional artist.

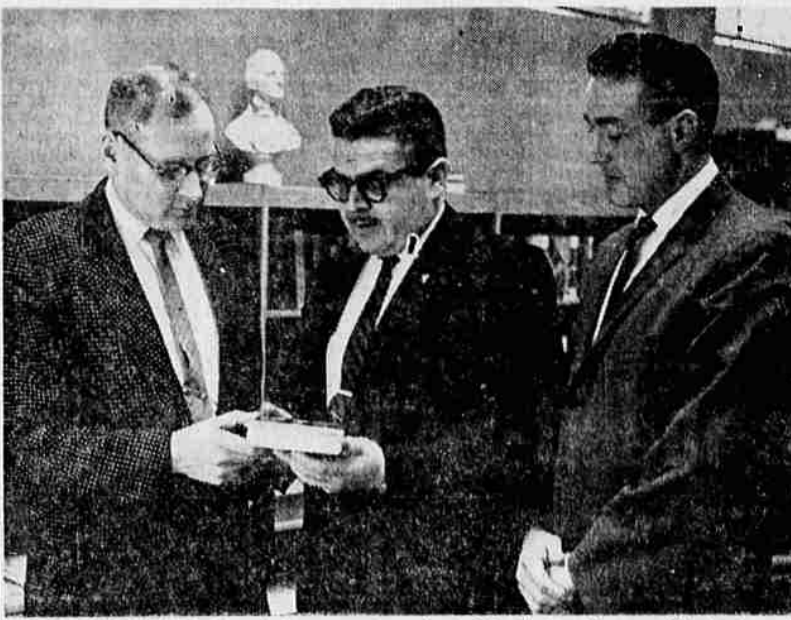

In line with his view that no irreconcilable gulf exists between management and labor, Goldberg said when he was appointed:

"Virtually all Americans work for a living or seek to do so. In a very real sense, therefore, the Department of Labor is a department of and for all Americans."

Moonshine Still Installed in Theater

Sheffield, Ala. - (UPI) - Police winked when theater manager M. A. Elkins installed a moonshine liquor still at the box office to promote a film.

But the officers looked again when they found a fire burning inside the distillery. Elkins was arrested on charges of operating an illegal liquor still.

City Firemen Are Called 62 Times

Medford's city fire department responded to 62 alarms during December, and the rural fire department responded to 13, according to Fire Chief Gordon Barker's monthly report.

Included in the 62 city alarms were 42 alarms for house fires. House fires included 30 started by sooty or defective flues, two started by careless smokers and two started by children playing with matches.

Two false alarms were turned into the department during the month. Department equipment spent a total of 33 hours, 16 minutes on alarms.

Of the 13 alarms responded to in the rural district, 10 of them were for dwelling fires, of which nine were started by sooty or defective flues. There were also two trash fires.

Rural equipment spent a total of 7 hours, 54 minutes on alarms.

One fire fatality occurred during the month in the city.

Growers Are Told Orchard Heaters in Area Being Changed

Jackson county fruit growers have converted slightly more open type heaters than their agreement with county officials calls for, Dunbar Carpenter, chairman of the air pollution committee, told the Jackson County Fruit Growers League Friday.

Carpenter said a check with valley suppliers of orchard heaters reveals 20,160 have been sold so far.

The agreement made with the county court and the Air Pollution Abatement League here calls for conversion of 10,000 heaters a year. Last year growers converted slightly more than that number.

Urges Compliance
Carpenter urged full compliance with the agreement to forestall restrictive legislation.

He noted that Presto-Logs are still being used to heat orchards. About 500 acres will be heated by this method this year, he said. This is an economical type of orchard heating for small orchards threatened with frost, and may be advantageous to the larger operations, he noted.

Paul Culbertson reported on the work of the experiment station and county extension committee. More personnel and a larger staff are urgently needed, he said.

More money will be needed June 30 to continue the pear decline research program. Transfer of property from the old Southern Oregon Branch Experiment station to the Hanley experimental farm near Jacksonville has largely been completed, he said.

Urges Membership
Steve Nye reported on the legislative committee and urged the pear growers to join the Farm Bureau so they could join forces with the state's agriculture.

Other reports were given by committees on public relations, finance, packing school, farm labor camp, and irrigation.

A no-host dinner will be held Monday night at Kim's restaurant to honor County Extension Agent Don Berry who is taking graduate work at the University of California at Davis, League President Charles Henry announced.
