

Yreka Council Considers Public Housing Measure

Yreka — The Yreka city council discussed measures to provide housing for persons receiving public assistance who are presently occupying condemned structures in the city, at its second January meeting.

The council promised co-operation with the county in plans to develop the veterans housing project into a low rental project for county indigents. However, the council suggested the county board of supervisors tour the project and study the matter thoroughly.

About 13 indigent families are believed to be occupying condemned structures in the "Sugar Bowl" area, according to W. M. vanOver, county welfare director. Others live in homes which may be condemned in the future, he said.

Lease Project — The possibility was mentioned that the city and county might be able to arrange an agreement whereby the county could lease the veterans project and maintain it for persons receiving public assistance. It would serve as a low rental project for county indigents only.

Concern was expressed by county officials that the veterans housing project buildings might be more of a liability than an asset for the county. They indicated maintenance costs might be too prohibitive but that the county would look into the matter further.

"These buildings came from Happy Camp after being worn out there," Councilman Jim Cummings said. He indicated that he would be willing to offer land and buildings to the county for a housing project, but suggested they consider more positive development than trying to maintain worn out buildings.

In other business, the council took no stand on a proposal to bring city roads up to state standards or on means of financing the program.

Juvenile Delinquency Problems Are Discussed by Yreka Elementary PTA

Yreka — "The problems presented by juvenile delinquency are not overwhelming and impossible to solve," Ronald Hayes, California area parole officer from Sacramento, told Yreka Elementary PTA members at their January meeting.

"The responsibility for meeting the challenge rests with the home and community — delinquency must be solved by preventing it," Hayes said. He listed the following eight points for parents as suggestions for prevention of delinquency:

1. Learn to know your child and the period of social development he is going through.
2. Know your child's assets and liabilities — utilize his strong points, not his weak ones.
3. Try to understand the child who exhibits problem behavior. What he does may be a substitute for what he can't say.
4. Don't take over your child's problems but assist him in working them through.
5. Guarantee opportunities for self expression and the release of energy, but always with respect to how it affects other people.

The students will arrive by special bus Friday evening and will be met at the Yreka Inn by the individual hosts. Saturday evening the students will present a program for the Rotary clubs and invited guests at a banquet to be held at the fairgrounds in the Winema hall at 7 p.m. Monday afternoon the students will again board the chartered bus and return to Berkeley.

Comedian Injured In Auto Collision

West Los Angeles — (UPI) — Comedian Mel Blanc, creator of the "what's up, doc?" voice of Bugs Bunny and many other cartoon characters, was in critical condition today at UCLA Medical Center from injuries received in a head-on car crash on Sunset Boulevard.

"A child is not born a delinquent," Mrs. Young said. Roger Ellis, superintendent of Dunsmuir elementary school presented the school's side of the problem, and suggested that the parent can best help the child by making him want to go to school, having a time and place for the child to work, and to have patience with your child.

Mrs. W. M. vanOver gave the probation department's views and said, "that the department must have the co-operation of the parents." The percentage of delinquents out of the juvenile population is three per cent, she said. Jess Brewer, summarizing for the panel said "The primary effort is to guide the minors into a useful life."

Nominating Committee — A nominating committee was appointed to select the officers for the coming year. Rutter answered many questions on the methods of which the firemen demonstrated and also questions which the local firemen asked concerning fighting fires in which there were "live" wires.

Foote said the planer is a 12-inch single surfacer approximately eight years old and in good operating condition. A stand and two horsepower motor go with it. Foote explained, and it can be seen at the shop.

In other school news, Foote said that the GLA is planning their cotton and cord dance for Feb. 4 in the gym. There will be a queen chosen from the class selling the most tickets, Foote said. The queen candidates are Mary Jo Hockaday, senior; Carol Gould, junior; Barbara McLane, sophomore and Virginia Dalton, freshman.

Committee Study Of School Needs Now Completed

Grants Pass — The 10-member citizens committee studying school building needs for the Josephine county school unit completed the study in a lengthy meeting Monday night, Jan. 23, in the office of Elmer Fleming, Josephine county school superintendent.

A poll of the nine members present following the evening's discussion indicated seven of them favored recommending to the county school board that there be a bond issue calling for construction of a junior high school and for necessary construction in other schools to bring schools in the northern end of the county up to standard. An eighth member agreed that this was his choice as a solution to the county's building needs, but added the stipulation that the bond issue not come up for consideration until late summer. He said poor business conditions in the area would make such an election unwise at this time. Other committee members agreed and this stipulation was added to the original recommendation.

The ninth committee member expressed the feeling that, although he personally felt the building of the junior high school would be the most economical and best for the county in the long run, he was going to recommend only basic repairs and construction at present elementary schools be made.

He said he felt county voters would not pass the larger bond issue. He was asked what would happen if this plan were adopted and the District 7 announces it is unable to handle county junior high school students due to overcrowded conditions. We will just have to hope this doesn't happen, he said.

Jack Edson, Medford architect, attended the meeting at the committee's request. Edson gave a cost estimate on construction of a junior high school which would accommodate about 450 students. He said basic expenses in building a junior high are the same for almost any size student body. Basic facilities would be a gymnasium, cafeteria, science laboratories, home economics rooms, wood and metal shops, music rooms and classrooms. He said the main difference in cost is relatively small since it includes only additional classrooms. Edson said a junior high for less than 400 or 500 students would be uneconomical but such a junior high could expand to take care of 200 additional students with little added expense.

Transportation — The committee agreed that transportation problems at the present time made it impossible for one junior high to serve the entire county. Expense of extra buses and a great inconvenience that would be presented to young children in outlying areas in the northern end of the county by having to be picked up on bus runs at a very early hour were recognized problems.

Since the crowded school problem is not acute at North Junior high presently, committee members indicated students living in outlying northern areas could be sent, as they are now, to this school.

The opinion was expressed that any bond issue should allow a large enough amount to solve this problem, but the majority opinion was that this could not be legally managed at the present time. Problems in the northern end of the county would be greatly assisted if necessary construction and repairs to schools such as Merlin and Fort Vanoy are carried out, some committee members said.

Federal Aid

Superintendent Fleming said it is doubtful Josephine county could qualify for federal aid in school construction since figures reveal the county has the lowest tax rate in the state; that it has no bonded indebtedness, although it is operating under a system which allows bonded indebtedness up to $5 million.

Fleming said the only factor which might counterbalance this is the low per capita income in the county. The feeling was expressed that a late summer election would give an opportunity to see what action, if any, the Kennedy administration was going to take on problems of federal aid to education. Committee chairman Don Wood was instructed to present the committee report at the next meeting of the county school board.

TEMPTATION

Gary, N. C. — (UPI) — Charles E. Parrish, 28, an honor grade convict at a prison road camp, was assigned Tuesday to work installing radios in shiny new Highway Patrol cars. The temptation was too great. He climbed in one of the new patrol cars and zoomed off, but was caught after a dozen or a few miles.

Rural Reflections

By MAUDE ZIEGLER

Applegate Valley — Little wild flowers "born to blush unseen" will be captured and their delicate shapes and colors pressed in books by the Valley Garden club.

There is one who inspires love in doing this. She sees further paths expressing love through the art of pressed flowers. When most are prone to buy greeting cards for birthdays this one says to take the flower of the birthday month, preserve it carefully on a card of one's own and present it as a greeting with a very personal touch.

She says to make a lovely pressed flower and frame it as a picture gift for a friend. She says a flower or two from a wedding could be preserved and presented to the bride as a gift long afterward. These little flowers, precious gifts from above, must be treated tenderly, she says. One uses tweezers in working with them so that none of the delicate powder on the petals is disturbed. They must be picked when first seen and put in water until one gets home.

Retaining their color is a first essential, and arranging the flower gracefully as it grew in nature is another must, preserving its comely contour. One can put with the flower its bud and seed pod, she says. This is "Hennie" Le Piniec passing on to others her love of nature.
