

Reds Have Lost 30,000 Members In India Lately

New Delhi - (UPI) - Ruling Congress party leaders estimated 30,000 Communists have resigned from the Communist party of India (CPI) during the past 15 months. Communist leaders refuse to confirm the figure, but admit there have been some withdrawals. According to the Reds, the defectors "never were real Communists, anyway."

A Communist member of parliament put it this way: "I would call them flexible politicians. They are weather vane, changing color according to the season."

48 Resign

The MP was commenting on well publicized reports that 48 Communists in the Punjab State of northern India had formally resigned from the CPI. In a statement they gave as their reason the "anti-national attitude" of the Indian Communists on the Sino-Indian border dispute and the local party's continued subservience to Peking and Moscow.

The defectors included one member of parliament and four members of the Punjab State Legislature. Predictably, the day following their resignation from the CPI they joined Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru's catch-all Congress party, noting it was "the only organization that can lead India to socialism."

The Communists seem pretty much responsible for their own troubles. Their failure to take a stand within reasonable time on the Sino-Indian border dispute hurt them badly. When the CPI finally did decide to back India, it was done at a noisy party conference which revealed strong backing for China among party elders.

No Importance

Communist party leaders said they attached no importance to the defections. They said the party would not be weakened.

A Communist party spokesman said the party's solid membership at present is about 3 million. In West Bengal (Calcutta) alone, he said, the party has 281,000 full-time workers.

The spokesman said the Communist party of India is the only solid opposition to the ruling Congress party and if ever a chance comes, it is "the one" who can replace it.

The spokesman described the resignations as only a temporary phase. He said that as soon as "conditions are normal" the party will regain its original prestige.

Duchess Speaks Against British Royal Family

New York - (UPI) - The American-born Duchess of Windsor has spoken out against the attitude of the British royal family, the British government and many of the British people toward her husband and disclosed that he has been deeply hurt by "24 years of persecution."

In the first of a series of monthly columns in McCall's Magazine, the Duchess said she decided to write the column because "the money is useful" and "at last I had a chance to tell the world what I think about the treatment of my husband."

"It suddenly occurred to me how ridiculous it is to go on being a family-designed, government-manufactured curtain of asbestos that protects the British Commonwealth from dangerous use," she said. "It also occurred to me that there was a way to dispel some myths and explode some canards that have been circulating about us for a quarter of a century."

Published for 24 Years

The Duchess charged that "for 24 years, my husband has been punished, like a small boy who gets a spanking every day of his life for a single transgression." But she said the Duke, who abdicated the throne to marry her in 1936, never said one word to her about how he felt until she consulted him about writing the column.

"Only now have we discussed it all," she said. "His hurt has been deep, and although I would not have our life together one whit different from what it is now, I cannot but know that the hurt he feels has been caused, to some extent, by me."

The Duchess denied that she "and the Duke live a 'playful existence'" and said she and her husband pay their bills.

Only 30, Texan Plays in Major League of Bridge

Austin, Tex. - (UPI) - Despite being only 30 years old in the towering bridge-playing world of the Jacobys and Gorens, Curtis Smith of Austin has played with the best in fine style.

As a matter of fact, Smith and Oswald Jacoby are collaborating on a book about their partner style of play that won them the National Bridge Tournament open-pair competition.

The 30-year-old Smith is making a living out of bridge. The operator of the Austin Bridge Studio explains that professional bridge is no windfall directly, but brings in good money indirectly. Smith says gross don't win cash prizes for bridge victories, but do get their name and fame before the public, and as a result people go to their studio for lessons or to buy their lesson plan.

The young professional started playing when he was 18 - the age when his contemporaries were learning to soup up hot rods or bang out a base hit. By the time he had gone through the University of California, studying mathematics, Smith decided he would try bridge for a career.

And about two years ago he decided to put his and Jacoby's bidding system down in writing so others could learn. Period of Years

"It's something we came to over a period of years," Smith said. "I had played with probably the best players in the country, and I have tried to use their ways of doing things in my methods."

Smith, who thinks Jacoby is as great as any bridge player, believes there's more to good bridge than sitting down with some friends and learning from the book.

"All good players have an apparent feel for cards - they have a card sense."

He says that with that card sense, a good memory, and some imagination, a person stands to get into the big leagues of bridge playing.

Whether the explanation is too long or Smith wants to keep trade secrets at home until he can publish the book, he is not too worried about the Jacoby-Smith system. He says it involves basically "very aggressive bidding."

By the end of the second round of bidding," he said, "one or the other of the partners will have limited the size of his hand, but the hand opposite, which makes the limit bid, can determine the level at which it should be played."

Smith believes the really good bridge players in this country total from 200 to 300. He thinks American players generally don't come up to the French and Italians.

Men Have Edge

Although he hedges a little when asked whether men or women play better bridge, Smith thinks men have the edge.

"A woman can't concentrate as well," Smith said. "Men are somewhat more aggressive."

A little of his reticence to bring up the man-woman question is caused by the fact that his wife, Jerry, helps Smith run the Austin Bridge Studio.

Smith says his son has been a bit slow to take up the game, and is far from being a professional. The son, David, is only 3 1/2 years old.

The child was named, by the way, after Dave Carter, a bridge player Smith admires.

Every Tax Return Checked for Errors

Washington - (UPI) - The more you earned last year, or the bigger your deductions are, the better the chances a treasury agent will check your tax return for zipping.

As far as arithmetic goes, every return is checked for errors. Double-check your return before mailing it.

All returns are subject to random or spot check. The chances go up with increasing income and deductions.

Regardless of income level, returns which are flagrantly fishy are more likely to get a special check by the tax agents.

Most Carbon Black Goes Into Tires

Tulsa, Okla. - (UPI) - Carbon black, used in the manufacture of automobile tires and other rubber products, is made by cracking hydrocarbons either natural gas, distillate or residual oil.

The Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association says that more than 95 per cent of all carbon black sold in this country goes to the rubber industry, and amounted to 1,008 to 1.4 billion pounds. Other uses are for printing ink, paints and photographic records.
